Kushog spray plan is up in the air

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

Plans to spray an insecticide on Kushog Lake area trees are now up in the air pending a meeting later this week to discuss objections to the proposal.

A few weeks ago, the Kushog Lake Property Owners Association, KLPOA, sent a letter to 473 lakeside property owners proposing an aerial spraying of a biological substance, Bt (Bacillus thuringiensis), over the properties of consenting owners. This is to provide some control over the expected massive infestation of forest tent caterpillars.

statements, and the plan in general. Ken, Gord and Harry Martin have sent a letter to the association, not only objecting to the plan, but also saying that if any of their property is inadvertently sprayed, "we will be forced to pursue legal action."

Here, in part, are some of the points raised in their letter, dated April 3 and read at last Wednesday's Stanhope council meeting:

"We feel caterpillars are a part of nature that occur on a regular basis. We have lived with this mild inconvenience over the past 40 years in this area... Yes, it is inconvenient, however, we are willing to put up with this as opposed to the abuse of our environment."

"We feel caterpillars are a part of nature that occur on a regular basis... Yes, it is inconvenient, however, we are willing to put up with this as opposed to the abuse of our environment."

"The forests, having to contend with acid rain and other pollutants, drought and changing weather conditions, are losing their ability to also fight off the devastation of the tent caterpillars," reads the letter. Whereas before the trees had the strength to survive the output of energy needed to provide a second growth of leaves, some people feel these other stresses are undermining the trees' natural resilience and now need man's help.

The letter stresses that Bt is "a naturally occurring soil bacteria, compatible with the environment. It has been in continuous use since the 1960's and has also undergone extensive laboratory testing... It is an environmentally compatible control agent which is fatal only to the caterpillar stage of insects in the moth and butterfly family. It is highly selective, that is, beneficial insects, birds, wildlife, pets, fish and people are not affected by it."

Disagreement with plan

But the Martin brothers of Buckslide Road disagree with such

"We are wary of the effects of this spray and its safety..."

"Our land occupies over 500 acres and the cost to spray this would be astronomical."

"Our well water comes from drainage within our property. The flow is an underground stream from the Kushog Lake area towards Halls Lake. We have pure water most of the year, but are very concerned about the effects this will have on our water supply and our resulting health problems."

"We are over 65 and we feel this makes our bodies more vulnerable to the effects of this spray."

"At our age, we do not feel that wandering around 500 acres of property to install marker balloons is an appropriate thing to do. (The association asked property owners not interested in the spray program to border their properties with balloons.) If you wish individual properties to be sprayed then install marker balloons within your properties."

"As your properties are very close

No nuclear waste says Reeve Davis

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

Stanhope Reeve Harry Davis is adamant that his township will not become the next dumping ground for "low level" nuclear waste.

Last week's snowstorm prevented him from getting to a Siting Task Force for Low Level Radioactive Waste in Peterborough. Local councillors had been invited to "exchange ideas" and were warned the hearings were not to be a forum for proposals.

"Participation in no way obliges your community to any future activities," the invitation read, but Davis wanted to make it absolutely clear that activities in Stanhope would never be welcome.

"There's no such thing as 'low level' nuclear waste," Davis says. "We just want them to stay out of here and we're not a bit interested in their so called low level waste."

While the province stresses that any sites would be chosen only if the township volunteers, Davis is afraid that if no volunteers show up, they might "take a notion" to start dumping in Stanhope.

When Davis's plan to attend the meeting were made known at last Wednesday's council meeting, councillors were in complete support of their reeve's stance.

Deputy Reeve Ann Barker said that Highway 35 provided a perfect route north from the Pickering Nuclear Station. Councillor Murray Daniels, while rejecting the notion, said he didn't think Stanhope would ever be chosen. "With all the lakes and rivers, I don't know how they could justify it."

Asphalt or nothing: Highland Gate

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Residents of Highland Gate Estates are unhappy with Minden Council's offer to cover the roads in their subdivision with a tar and gravel mix, and may seek legal action against the township to get their roads paved with hot-mix asphalt in accordance with a 1982 bylaw.

In a closed session last Thursday, council decided to cover the subdivision's roads with a low-cost bituminous treatment, as well as provide asphalt gutters on the steep hill leading to Deep Bay Road to handle run-off. The cost estimated for this work is $25,000.

Council also offered to pay $25,000 to cover half the cost of asphalt paving, as long as the residents of Highland Gate paid the difference.

Doug Campbell, spokesman for the subdivision residents, has been living at Highland Gate Estates since last December and says he isn't satisfied with either proposal. He also doesn't think it's fair to include the asphalt gutters into the agreement, because "council is just making the residents pay for the cost of fixing up the townships mistakes."

"There's a fair downhill run down to Deep Bay Road, and that used to be a two-lane entrance with a center boulevard strip. Then the town took over and approached the citizens about taking out the center strip, so most assumed that work was to precede a paving of the road. Now the strip is gone, the roads aren't paved and they're having problems with run-off. It isn't $25,000 that they're offering at all. It's more like $14,000 for road surface treatment."

Resident Paul Heffer was living in the subdivision when the median strip was removed to make maintenance and plowing more cost

'Preservation of natural resources at risk'

The Minister of the Environment thinks we're beginning to win the battle

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Ontario is winning the fight against acid rain, says environment minister Jim Bradley.

"In Ontario, we're moving steadily towards our goal of a 60 per cent province-wide cutback in emissions of sulphur dioxide," he says. "At the same time, we are working hard to persuade our American neighbors to follow our lead."

The environment minister was featured speaker at a meeting of the Federation Of Ontario Cottagers' Associations (FOCA), at Scarborough's Renaissance Hotel. Bradley acknowledged FOCA's involvement in the Canadian Coalition On Acid

Rain, and says we must continue to put pressure on the United States to cut down on acid gas emissions.

The province's Countdown Acid Rain Abatement program is a major step toward reducing sulphur dioxide emissions across Ontario by 60 per cent of the 1980 base case levels by 1994.

"As cottagers, I know that you are concerned about the quality of our lakes, recreational land and forests," he says.

Bradley told cottagers that acid rain threatens, not only their investments in property, but also our natural resources.

Because of continuing acid rain from Canadian and U.S. sources, about 14,000 lakes in Eastern Canada are considered dead.

Bradley says the deposition rate of sulphur dioxide has been as high as 40 kilograms per hectare in some places. In Muskoka, the rate of wet acid deposition is about 32 kilograms per hectare.

"Scientists are now telling us that the same pollution which causes acid rain also damages human health," environment minister Jim Bradley told members of FOCA at their spring seminar.

Lakes, forests and wildlife are all being damaged by acid rain, says Bradley. When lakes acidify, the aquatic ecosystem is disrupted and fish, minnows, frogs and crayfish all disappear. Forests are dying because of polluting gases, he says.

"The preservation of the beautiful natural resources we cherish is a risk, and scientists are now telling us that the same pollution which causes acid rain also damages human health," he says. "Many scientist and doctors are now convinced of the damage done to our health by the gases that cause acid rain."

Sulphur dioxide is formed when the sulphur in ore, coal or oil is burned. This colorless gas is emitted from smokestacks, and since it is invisible, plants which appear to be clean may "spew out Roles change in fire dept.

by LEN PIZZEY
Editor

Dysart et al has a new fire chief, but he's certainly not new to the organization. On Monday, council confirmed the appointment of Lloyd 'Buck' Baker as chief of the volunteer brigade on an interim basis.

Baker takes over from Mike Stinson, who has stepped down to become deputy chief. Steve Roberts has also been named deputy chief of the department.

Reeve Murray Fearrey time

demands were the reason for the changes.

"Restrictions on (Stinson's) time were such that he agreed at this time to act as deputy chief," Fearrey said. Stinson is a full time employee of the Dysart roads department in addition to his fire department responsibilities. Baker, the most senior member of the department and one of the longest serving volunteer firefighters in Ontario, is retired.

Fearrey said Steve Roberts, a partner in Roberts Austin Fuels, has moved up to deputy chief for a training period, and council hopes he will be able to assume the duties of chief within a few months.

Power disrupted as snow blankets lines

by LEN PIZZEY
Editor

A late season storm that dropped at least 15 centimetres of heavy wet snow on Haliburton County last Wednesday night caused power interruptions throughout the area. Worst hit were the northern and eastern portions of the county, although problems occurred throughout the area, according to Jim Davis of Ontario Hydro's Minden office. Power was cut when branches laden with snow contacted lines, causing short circuits that tripped fuses. Some lines also were snapped when limbs broke under the weight of the snow. In instances where limbs bend but do not break "you get a two edged problem," Davis said. The branches trip fuses as they brush the wires on the way down, and hours later, as the snow melts and the branches spring back up, they can cause the power to go off again. While most of the problems last Thursday morning were on secondary lines, a 7200 volt, three phase line in the Kennis Lake area was damaged. Near Halls Lake, one of the hardest hit areas, eight of nine switches at the distribution station were tripped, and crews had a hard time clearing all the lines to get them back on. Many people reported seeing balls of flame as limbs came down across wires. Davis said most permanent residents had their power restored by Thursday evening, but there were a few who did not get service again until Friday. Calls also came in on the weekend when people came up to their cottages and discovered they had no power. A helicopter was pressed into service Thursday morning to search for problems. It flew low over the wires, and the wash of its rotor helped blow snow off of limbs that were contacting lines, Davis said. Problems remain in a few isolated areas and islands, Davis said. Minden crews hope to reach them by helicopter and a hovercraft vehicle.

Man killed in storm crash

by LEN PIZZEY
Editor

Heavy snowfall last Wednesday was a contributing factor in an accident that killed a Dorset man. William Wyrozub, age 69, was northbound on County Road 8 at about 6:45 p.m. when he lost control of his vehicle and slid into the southbound lane, colliding with a vehicle driven by Kari Aubin. Wyrozub was taken to Huntsville Hospital and transferred to Toronto General Hospital, where he died. Aubin and a passenger in her car sustained minor injuries.

A heavy load

Wet snow clung to tree branches and power lines last Thursday after what is hoped to be an end-of-season storm. Roads crews had to react quickly to put blades back on plows and Hydro crews spent a couple of days restoring power to many homes in the northern and eastern parts of the county. The weather continued to be cold, however sunny skies should soon melt the remaining signs of winter.

Demand leads Dysart to buy industrial land

by LEN PIZZEY
Editor

Dysart council is negotiating the purchase of 62 acres of land to add to its existing industrial park. The parcel, on the south side of Robertson Road, is being purchased from the estate of Jack Roberston. Council will have to rezone the parcel and survey individual lots, as well as extend the existing road to service it. Sites on the new property are not expected to be available before 1990, reeve Fearrey said. Dysart's industrial park has been a major success. It was created to give existing and new businesses a place to establish their operations, and it allowed many service businesses to move their storage facilities and workshops out of residential zones. Prices were low — $5,000 or less on average — and interest in the lots has been strong, with only two of the original 22 lots as yet unsold. Already, "five or six people" are waiting for lots in the Roberston lands, Fearrey said. Fearrey said council will be able to create better lots on the new property than were available in the first phase of the industrial park. It intends to impose tighter restrictions on the appearance of sites in the new lands than it did in phase one of the park, Fearrey said. While the price of lots on the Roberston property has not been established, council will continue its policy of providing them as inexpensively as possible. The aim is not to make money for the municipality, the reeve said, but to help businesses establish a base in the community.

Road allowance fee is expected to rise

by LEN PIZZEY

It's going to cost more to purchase unopened road allowances in Dysart et al, but just how much more has not yet been established. Under present policy, council charges $100 a foot to adjacent property owners who apply to purchase unused 66 foot road allowances leading to water between their properties, or a total of $6,600, no matter how long the allowance is. The price, reeve Murray Fearrey told council recently, "is way too low." Fearrey suggested the price should be at least $10,000 to more fairly reflect the value of the property being purchased. But even that figure appears conservative in light of the rapidly escalating value of lakeshore lands in the municipality, which can be $600 to $800 a foot, or even more, for prime property on the most desirable lakes. In most instances where a road allowance is sold, the land is divided among abutting property owners, who share the cost, and then add the new parcel to their lots, gaining an additional 33 feet of shoreline, as well as an assurance of privacy. Councillor Glen Hodgson suggested council's property committee should look at each request individually to decide whether the property should be sold, and what value should be placed on it, considering such factors as terrain and the value of other lands on the lake. Reeve Fearrey disagreed. "I think you're opening yourself to some real criticism if you set individual values" he said. Deputy reeve Bill Davis argued for setting the purchase price per foot high enough that it would average out over more and less desirable properties. He added that

BREACH OF UNDERTAKING

A 19 year old Haliburton man was arrested for breach of undertaking early Saturday morning. Ronnie Clement, who is at large on several narcotics charges, was found in violation of a judicial undertaking he entered into before a Justice of the Peace. Clement will be held in custody pending another bail hearing in Lindsay.

IMPAIRED DRIVER

Jeffrey Watson, age 20, of Bowmanville has been charged with impaired driving and driving over the legal limit after an iaccident April 14 in the Wilverforce area. Watson is also charged with dangerous driving, failing to stop for police, driving with open liquor, and breach of probation. He is scheduled to appear in court June 7.

DOMESTIC COMPLAINT

A 26 year old Rexdale man faces a number of charges following a domestic complaint at a residence in West Guilford. Terry Kondrotas had been drinking before he attempted to leave the residence. A second person attempted to stop him from driving and was assaulted. Kondrotas left, but was stopped by police when he returned to the area about two hours later. Kondrotas was charged with impaired driving, driving over the legal alcohol limit of 80 mgs., driving with open liquor in a vehicle, assault causing bodily harm, and possession on a narcotic. He was arrested and held for a bail hearing in Lindsay.

POSSESSION OF STOLEN PROPERTY

Ronald Alton, age 37, of Oshawa, has been charged with possession of stolen property, following police investigations that date back to March 8. Alton is scheduled to appear in provincial court on June 7.

THEFTS

A number of items were reported stolen around the county in the past week. They include a red 1989 Honda ATV from Prentice Berry Ltd. of Minden; $200 in cash and $300 in quarters from the West Guilford Laundromat; four orange 4800 watt Chromalax heaters in Minden; a 1987 Ski Doo Safari licence number 374007 from Haliburton Forest and Wildlife Reserve; a 20" Sony colour television, black and silver, from Birch Narrows road; and a 14 foot green fibreglass canoe and 9.8 hp Viking outboard motor in the Raven Lake area.

Firehall addition likely in Stanhope budget

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

Although exact figures are not available, Stanhope council can expect a request for an addition to the Firefighter's Community Hall in the next budget.

"Just so you're not surprised," councillor Eleanor Harrison, who is council's representative on the fire department committee, told her fellow councillors that the engineer who first drafted a plan for the expansion has been asked to update that figure into 1989 costs.

The proposed expansion would extend the hall's storage area 36 feet towards the library and 60 feet back towards the recreational park. It would be used to house the department's four vehicles and the present garage area would become office and training space. Once the frame was up, the firemen would provide the labour.

When the proposal has been mentioned at past council meetings, the response has not been enthusiastic, but Harrison said the department has "convinced me that they definitely need something." A 1986 fire protection survey recommended that an addition be added and the fire station be renovated to accommodate an office for the fire chief.

"I'm convinced too," said councillor Fred Gardner.

Councillor Murray Daniels expressed concern over the drawings for the addition in relation to the vehicles' ease getting in and out of the building during emergencies. This would have to be addressed if council approves the addition during its budget talks later this month.

Paints, cleaners should have separate garbage disposal

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Municipalities must be urged to start household hazardous waste collection days, says a representative of the Ontario Waste Management Corporation (OWMC).

Tracy Patterson spoke at the spring seminar of the Federation Of Ontario Cottagers' Associations (FOCA), and said widely-used products such as paints, oven cleaner, furniture polish, toilet bowl cleaner and left-over barbecue starter fluid are classified as household wastes and can be harmful to people as well as the environment if not disposed of properly.

"The reality is that Canada, although a small country, pollutes to its limits," said Patterson. "Industrial waste is regulated by the government, but what happens to household hazardous wastes? It usually means that the lakes or the rivers that you swim in are affected."

Consumers need to be more selective in purchasing household products, and must start thinking about old-fashioned substitutions for products that contain toxic chemicals, Patterson said.

"Stop buying glass and tile cleaner, and substitute it with vinegar and water," she urged. "Scrub your sinks and tubs with baking soda, and use the same to clean your oven."

"Fifty years ago they used these products with a little elbow grease. I think we have to start looking at those foams that slide down a wall and eat away dirt with disdain."

Patterson also suggested that consumers avoid the use of aerosol sprays, avoid mixing different products (which could cause explosive or poisonous chemical reactions) and give excess quantities of products away to those who will use them rather than throwing them out. She also told cottagers to contact the department of works in their municipalities to ask for details about starting collection days for household hazardous waste, if such a program isn't being done already.

Referring to Loblaw's new green products, Patterson said the grocery chain is "just responding to pressures applied by organizations and the public for environmentally friendly products. They see there is a market, but at least we are being heard. We must act now, because we're running out of time."

Keith Sherman, who works for the environment ministry, said biodegradable products are wrongly named. "Virtually everything is biodegradable, but the question is the amount of time it takes to break down."

Sherman agreed that more people have to watch what products they are using. "Many things that normally don't occur to us as being toxic will affect us in the long run."

He also warned cottagers to find out the phosphorous content of products such as dishwashing detergent and other soaps, because lake algae thrive on phosphates.

"All products have labels, but they don't say what the phosphate level is. Phosphates do a great job in getting spots and grease off of plates, but they will also cause a great deal of algae."

Lake algae is not only an aesthetic problem. When it's dense enough, algae can cause allergic reactions in people. Algae has even proven to be toxic to some animals, he said.

"I've heard of animals, even cattle, that have died after drinking

Minister Jim Bradley: 'Our province is becoming cleaner'

Cottagers worry over impact of municipal grants freeze

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Because of recent cutbacks in provincial transfer payments to municipalities, many cottagers are concerned that they will be hit for more property taxes, says a Federation of Ontario Cottagers' Association representative.

John Beare, chairman of the taxation committee for FOCA, says cottagers are concerned about how they will be affected by the province's freeze of unconditional grants and roads subsidies paid to municipalities.

Northern municipalities will suffer disproportionately because a greater portion of their operating budgets come from unconditional grants.

Such grants, given to municipalities to spend as they wish, were set up to help local governments provide services under their jurisdiction and to help offset large property tax increases.

"I would suspect there will be serious consequences in Haliburton," says Beare, an economics teacher at York University. "I'm from the Muskoka area, and we are just in the process of finding out how much the area will be getting in grants, but we know they are down."

Last year, the province gave municipalities $871-million in unconditional grants. On Dec. 12 the province announced that money that would normally go to increase unconditional grants was being directed instead to conditional grants, which are directed to specific projects or programs identified as high priority items.

"As far as (FOCA is) concerned, this is something we view with considerable dismay," Beare says. "We think there should be far less burden on the property tax, and that much more of the financing of provincial services, particularly education, should be based on an income related tax base."

"One of the things that seems to be going on that we object to is that the provincial government is trying to finance more of their expenditures, worthy though they might be, by the only tax base available to municipalities and school boards, and we just don't think that's right."

FOCA's stand is that more financing should be based on income tax, because it is a better measure of a person's ability to pay. Beare believes this is more fair for residents, as well as cottagers.

"No other province and no other country relies as heavily on the property tax as does Ontario," says John Beare, a FOCA representative.

"We have obvious interest in this as cottagers because we pay those property taxes twice. But we think that the property tax system also discriminates against people who live in smaller towns because their incomes are low relative to the provincial average, and the property taxes for them are more onerous than the income taxes."

"If somebody owns a condo in Florida, they're obviously spending money outside of the province. But if somebody owns a cottage in Haliburton, Muskoka or Kawartha, they're spending their money in the province, and they get hit with higher taxes."

FOCA has also spoken out against the use of lot levies, and say they recognize the logic of using them instead of property tax for municipal growth-related capital costs.

In the FOCA position paper on the Provincial Green Paper concerning lot levies for municipal and school board capital projects, it says "it is inappropriate that such a large amount of revenue should be raised from the rough and imperfect local tax base...when financing from fairer and more efficient provincial sources is available."

According to FOCA, the Green Paper states an expectation that the average rate of provincial support on approved school construction costs would fall from the current average of 75 per cent to an average of 60 per cent, placing a substantial increase in burden at the local level for needed school construction.

Americans more aware of acid rain

prodigious quantities of sulphur dioxide."

Sulphur dioxide is converted to sulfuric acid mist, and fine particles of sulphate once it is exposed to the atmosphere. These sulphate particles can "reach the deepest recesses of the human lung," says Bradley.

In Canada, eminent air pollution researcher, Dr. David Bates has been studying the relation between acid pollution and hospital admissions over the past 14 years.

"Studies show that when sulphate and ozone and temperature increase, so do hospital admissions for respiratory disease," says Bradley.

Results found by Dr. Bates are consistent with a study done by Ontario Hydro researchers who have found that, not only hospital admissions, but total mortality rates increase as sulphate levels rise.

In his travels, Bradley has discovered that more people in the United States are opening their eyes to the hazards of acid rain, and he believe they may be on their way to controlling emissions, slowly but surely. Even those in the coal industry are beginning to "drop their long standing opposition to controls on acid gas emission."

"Of course, they are trying to soften the impending legislation and mold it to protect the economic interest of their constituents; but they are abandoning their old positions of opposing any acid rain legislation," says Bradley.

In Ontario, Bradley says acid rain polluters have been forced to drastically cut their emissions. He

And Bradley says our prospects of getting the U.S. to take similar action are now better than ever before.

But he is concerned that the bill U.S. congress passes will be "good enough to protect our resources, and will include a permanent cap."

In February, senator Max Baucus, chairman of the senate's environmental protection subcommittee, announced that clean air legislation would be introduced as a series of separate sections on air toxics, acid rain and ozone. The acid rain component should be introduced by this June.

Last month, a bill dealing with acid gas abatement was introduced in the U.S. house of representatives by a large coalition of democrats and republicans, says Bradley. The bill proposes a 10-million ton reduction in sulphur dioxide emissions by 1998, with the first five million cut due by 1994.

Bradley also says that the White House has finally become "an active participant in the formulation of clean air legislation." He says President Bush's administration announced it will release its proposals for amendments to the Clean Air Act by the middle of May. Still, Bradley says he isn't holding his breath on the matter.

"I've adopted a wait and see attitude. While I'm pleased with this apparent progress, we must continue to press the Americans, and the new Bush administration, to fulfill their obligations on the acid rain front. We don't have the luxury of becoming complacent now that the Americans seem poised to act."

says the single largest source of sulphur dioxide on the continent, the Inco nickel smelter in Sudbury, must reduce its emissions 67 per cent by 1994. Ontario Hydro, Falconbridge and Algoma Steel at Wawa must also comply with the province's Countdown Acid Rain Abatement Program, which is backed by $25,000 a day fines.

Ontario Hydro has been prompted to build Canada's first eight acid gas scrubbers at fossil-fueled generating stations. "Billions of dollars are being spent in this effort to scrub stack gases clean," says Bradley. "I can tell you, our province is on its way to becoming a cleaner and safer place for all Ontarians."

In a similar program, the eastern half of Canada is proceeding to cut its sulphur dioxide emissions by 50 percent by 1994.

Even with cutbacks, district's capabilities good, Stanhope told

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

Despite a 40 per cent staff reduction, the Ministry of Natural Resources' fire station in Haliburton will be better equipped to fight forest fires, Stanhope council was told last Wednesday.

"You're sitting with a stronger fire fighting unit in Haliburton," operations manager Tom Russell said.

Because of its central location, the Haliburton fire operation headquarters—which is responsible for 13 municipalities and Algonquin Park—will receive 15 to 20 more pumping units to augment the 10 already at the station, along with 20,000 feet of hose.

"Would they (the pumping units) be available to us," a councillor asked. "No, I can't offer you that," Russell responded. That is, if there is a brush fire in Stanhope and the firefighters really needed a pump, they could phone the MNR station and ask for assistance. An MNR crew would then be sent out with a pumping unit. But the pumps must be stored in Haliburton and operated by MNR crews.

When councillor Murray Daniels questioned this policy, Russell said that the coverage area was so large, he had to be sure the equipment was close at hand.

Many local firefighters and councillors were concerned when the MNR announced that staff reductions would mean the responsibility of fighting forest fires now falls back on municipalities, in accordance with an agreement signed many years ago but never strictly enforced until the ministry was faced with budget restraints.

"The biggest concern is the amount of time volunteers have to spend at fires," Russell said. "The only change in Stanhope may be a requirement for municipal fire crews to go back the next day and do the mopping up."

"Most of the firefighters are volunteers and if their bosses have a man out for five or six days, these jobs might not be there when they get back," said Deputy-Reeve Ann Barker, whose husband Don is the Deputy Fire Chief.

"The firemen are not happy but their choices are limited," said councillor Eleanor Harrison, who is council's representative on the fire department committee.

"We have to make it work," Russell said.

One option raised at the meeting is whether cottagers could be trained to fight forest fires. After completing a short course, the MNR will pay a volunteer $12.13 an hour for time spent at a fire, an incentive to recruit more firefighters. This prompted councillors to wonder if "we've been low on our wages for a few years."

Russell doesn't expect Stanhope to need the MNR's help very often this summer, however. The township's fire department has an 80 per cent fighting capability, he said, placing it top in the county. In comparison, Lutterworth, which doesn't have a fire department, has a 25 per cent fighting capability. Some others are in the 30 to 40 per cent range, Russell said.

"If they do need our help, we never question them," Russell said after the meeting.

Reaction to the changes have been similar across the province, he said. "There was a big scare all of a sudden but now it appears we'll give it a chance and see how it works."

In this shifting of people and resources, the Hel-itac unit might be based here this summer, meaning a faster response time by the "helicopter attack" team.

"By having it here, we'll probably have more crews here during the dry season," Russell said. As well, management will be on call more often to fight fires.

But he did have some advice for council at the meeting. "There's a new agreement being drawn up and when it comes out, it's very important the council has a really good look at it before it's finalized."

Construction to start in June, airport to be closed for season

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

Stanhope Airport will be closed this summer but offsetting any inconvenience to pilots is the promise of better flying opportunities in the future.

Work will soon be underway to upgrade and pave the grass runway at the airport, just north of Highway 118, bringing to fruition years of negotiations between the municipality, airport committee and federal and provincial transport officials.

"These improvements will be a great asset to the community," Reeve Harry Davis told his fellow councillors last Wednesday. With an improved airstrip, it is hoped more tourism dollars will be flying into the Highlands. Use of the airport has been restricted in the past because some pilots felt uncomfortable landing on the grass. As well, Davis said, "it was always difficult to keep the runway useable."

Don't be surprised if new superintendent sings as he drives

by LEN PIZZEY
Editor

Dysart et al is getting a new road superintendent in James Taylor, but that's not all it's getting. The community is also gaining a Barbershop singing enthusiast, an expert handball player, an avid cross country skier, a devoted fisherman, and perhaps even a new stagehand for the local theatre group. Jim Taylor may know a lot about roads, but he's also keenly interested in other aspects of community life, and he thinks living in Haliburton will prove to be a rewarding experience.

So far, he has nothing but enthusiasm both for his new job and for the warm reception he has been given by Dysart et al staff. Since beginning his duties on April 10, he's been touring the area with Howard Roberts, who is retiring as roads superintendent at the end of the month, getting to know the roads system and getting comfortable with his new responsibilities.

Taylor brings considerable experience to Dysart. A native of Hamilton, he has been doing roads related work since 1958, when he first joined Ontario's department of highways. Subsequently he was hired by an Ottawa-based consulting firm as an inspector. He earned certification as a survey technologist and as an engineering technologist, moving to St. Catharines to work for another consulting firm. He then was hired by the County of Welland as a field supervisor. When the county was absorbed into the Regional Municipality of Niagara, he continued to work for the new organization.

In 1984, Taylor became city superintendent for Port Colborne, overseeing the operation of the roads, water and sewer departments, sanitary landfill sites and flood gates.

The Dysart position, which was advertised across the province, caught Taylor's eye, and a visit to the area confirmed it was a job he wanted.

"I looked at it for health reasons as well as the beauty of the country," he said. There is far more pollution in the Niagara area than here, and the opportunity for the kind of outdoor recreation that he enjoys, was limited.

New on the scene: James Taylor

"I do a lot of cross country skiing and I love fishing. Every hill I went over, there was a lake."

When council asked him to come for an interview, he brought his skis along. He did 10 kilometres on one of the PineStone loops and ended up exhausted but exhilarated. It wasn't the distance, it was the hills. There aren't many around Port Colborne.

As well as skiing and fishing, Taylor also enjoys Barbershop singing. There are no Barbershop quartets in the area, but that could change if Taylor, a bass, can find three other like-minded and fine voiced people to join him.

He has played handball for many years, and expects to make the switch to squash and join the Haliburton club. He has also worked backstage on little theatre production in Port Colborne, and when that message got out through the 'jungle telegraph', he was soon asked if he'd do the same for the Highlands Little Theatre group.

FACTS

Q. How does what I eat relate to my chances of having a heart attack or stroke?

A. If you eat fatty foods — such as butter, whole milk, ice cream, cream cheeses — or use saturated oil in cooking, your body is taking in too much fat. Eating these foods can lead to a build-up of fatty deposits in the arteries of your heart. Clogged arteries are the leading cause of heart attack and stroke.

Residents not satisfied by paving offer efficient, and says he was given the impression that the roads would be paved soon after.

The residents of Highland Gate each received a copy of two bylaws along with their land transfer deed when they purchased a lot in the subdivision. A 1978 bylaw drawn up for Highland Gate Estates specified the area as an urban subdivision, with standard storm sewers, curbing, gutters and hot-mix asphalt. A 1982 bylaw was agreed upon when Minden council, headed by Reeve Lloyd Walker at that time, approached developer Roy Windover and offered to pave the road with hard-top in exchange for one of the lots in the subdivision.

"The normal scenario for an urban subdivision is that the developer should put in an asphalt road himself," says Heffer. "That was the original intent, and that was the original ruling. The township took over that responsibility when they took the lot. Now they're trying to offer a lower standard road covering."

The agreement stated that money earned from the sale of that lot would be used to pave the roads of Highland Gate. According to Heffer, the lot wasn't even put on the market, and was finally sold in 1987 for $10,000.

Campbell says if the lot had been sold in 1982, the money would have been enough to cover costs of paving with asphalt.

Residents are also angered because they are classified as living in an urban subdivision, "which puts us in the highest taxation group in town," says Campbell. "There have been houses here since 1980, and the people have been getting along with dirt roads at the same time that the town has been collecting a fair share of taxes."

There are 37 lots in the subdivision, with 19 homes at present and another three to be built this year.

Spokesmen from the Huntsville transportation ministry office told council they would subsidize covering the roads to bring them up to suburban subdivision standards.

In a suburban subdivision, lot frontage is 100 feet or larger (so, "for every 300 feet you would have six taxpayers," says Campbell), and the "absolute minimum" required road covering is tar and gravel. In an urban subdivision, such as Highland Gate Estates, the lot frontage is smaller at 75 feet (with eight taxpayers for every 300 feet), and hot-mix asphalt paving is required for the roads.

"What the town is doing is taking our urban subdivision, and the taxes that go with it, and then offering us the lowest standard road covering possible," says Campbell.

"I think that we attempted to resolve the issue as best we could," says Moore. "It's really a legal type problem, because of the bylaw. The asphalt is supposed to be in an urban subdivision, but the MTO would have permitted suburban standards. Normally the developer would be responsible for cost of the roads, but there's been so much playing around since the 1978 agreement. Mr. Campbell is being offered a heck of a lot more now than he was by previous councils, and the decision is now in his ballpark."

Campbell says he is appreciative of the fact that the present council is the first to listen to the paving issue. He says the previous council told residents that their roads was a private one, and the 1982 bylaw "isn't worth the paper it's written on."

"This council here at least tried to do something," says Campbell. "They started off at a point where they didn't want to listen, then to split the cost of chip and dip (gravel and tar) and to the point where we are now."

Campbell will meet with the subdivision's lawyer on Thursday to discuss the possibility of taking the township to court, and will then discuss the matter with the subdivision committee.

"We've already offered to take less than what the bylaw states we should have," he says. "We're not pushing for the storm sewers, or curbs or gutters. But we are pushing for the hot-mix asphalt, and it's on the basis that they're offering us the absolute minimum so they can get a subsidy that our unhappiness exists. Indeed, that is the basis of our dispute, disappointment, whatever you want to call it."

Reeve Moore says his council have "bent over backward" to resolve the issue, and decided on the tar and gravel because the MTO offered to subsidize half the cost. He says if the roads needed improvement or sewers, it could be paid through local improvement tax. If 66 per cent of the residents agree, work can be done by "local improvement initiative" where the cost would be paid for by a tax increase over a 15-20 year period.

The reeve says he doesn't believe the residents will sue the township, and says any legal costs could be used toward paying the difference in cost for paving the road with asphalt.

"They may not be happy, but I think they'll accept," says Moore. "Suing the township may cost the same as paving the road—so who's winning?"

Campbell insists that council's offer to foot half of the bill for asphalt paving is unsatisfactory.

"Reeve Moore is conveniently overlooking the fact that all townships have to comply with bylaws passed by previous councils in accordance with the Municipal Act. If we were to give them the money to help pay for the road, we would in effect be supporting anarchy."

Committee to improve children's services

by SUSAN GROBER

Staff Reporter

The social action committee for Haliburton County is looking for proposals for new or improved services for children and their families after receiving an allocation of $100,000 per year from the Ministry of Community and Social Services.

The target groups are children at risk of developing a mental health disorder, children with a mental health disorder and children who are seriously and/or chronically disturbed.

"We are currently evaluating our own services according to the ministry's directions in their study, Investing In Children," says Gena Robertson, chairperson of the Children's Services Committee.

The committee is comprised of representatives from health, education and social services. Based on a review of local services, parent and family support, planning and assessment were identified as three major need areas for priority ranking for use of the $100,000.

Robertson says she can't be sure exactly how the money will be used until she receives proposals from people looking to "augment programs which are already in service," or develop new programs.

"It could go either way," she says. "I can't really say what's going to come in, it's up to the people who send their proposals. We currently have services like Kinark, CHACE, Wee Care, infant development and many others."

"The money must go toward early identification and prevention of mental health disorders in children, and services could be a variety of things. We also want to involve family services, because family is interconnected in a child's health, and related in assisting the children."

Agencies or organizations interested in developing a program to meet one of the three need areas may submit proposals to the committee before May 3. Proposals should include summary outline of the program, planning and goals, identification of the target population, needs assessment, objectives for the program, methods of evaluation and detailed budget (up to $100,000 for operating costs).

Proposals should illustrate how the proposed programs fits with the current system of children's services.

Fees to reflect market values

council should first consider whether the allowances should be sold at all.

Fearrey said council should "put a good, reasonable figure on it and treat everyone the same."

"Pay a fair market value, and make it simple," he said.

He agreed council should look at each individual request from property owners and decide if the allowance ought to be sold or retained by the municipality.

"Sometimes there's good reason to sell it," he said, but the municipality could also end up with no public access to a lake if it doesn't move carefully.

Councillor John Parish said he believed the best approach would be to hire an appraiser to determine a fair market value for each allowance.

"Thirty three feet on Drag Lake is not that same value as 33 feet on Paradise Lake," he said.

In the end, council did not set a new price. Instead, it held the matter over for a month, and in the meantime will get information on how other municipalities determine a price for road allowances that lead to water.

Superintendent reception warm

Although he has only been on the job officially since last Monday, Taylor doesn't expect to encounter many unforeseen difficulties in managing the Dysart roads department. The people may be new to him, but the organization and the responsibilities are similar to those in his previous job.

"Council has been excellent to me. They've made my coming up here very generous, and they seem to be very co operative as far as any help I need."

The roads department employees "have been really kind," he said. "They seem to be a very co operative and helpful group. I think it's going to be a good relationship."

Taylor, who is single, has two grown children, a daughter Melody, 27, who is a buyer for the city of London, and a son Paul, 22, a graphic artist employed by Niagara region. He intends to buy a house in the area and settle down to enjoy what it has to offer.

"I'm going to do my best to make a go of it here," he says.

Helping hands

There are many ways for people to contribute to the community in which they live. Some ways are public and obvious, others more private and subtle. But whatever the position, whatever the service, people who give their time and energy to others, sustain the bond that helps hold communities together.

It's easy enough to recognize some of the people who are giving something of themselves back to the community. They serve on council or the school board, coach minor hockey and school teams, lead cadets, Brownies or Cubs. There are others who also give, though in positions that are slightly less public. These are the men and women who work for service clubs, hold executive positions on local organizations, chair fund raising committees and organize community events. But there is another level of volunteerism, the least obvious but by no means the least important level. These volunteers are seldom recognized by the public, and in fact, many of them prefer to keep it that way. They serve not for the reward of praise, but for the personal reward of knowing that they have helped, in a small way perhaps, to make the community a better place.

Hundreds of such people live among us, and serve as volunteers in one form or another every day. One helps seniors complete their income tax forms. Another helps teachers do a better job in the classroom. Yet another is a volunteer driver for the Children's Aid Society. In every organization, in every facet of community life, there are people who contribute time, or money, or both, to projects, services, institutions and causes that enrich community life.

At a time when the pace of life is quickening, when the quest for affluence is blinding many to matters of the human spirit, when beauty and silence and wonder are under constant assault, it is heartening to know that many people still have time to give, and still find service to others not merely rewarding, but part of the purpose of life itself.

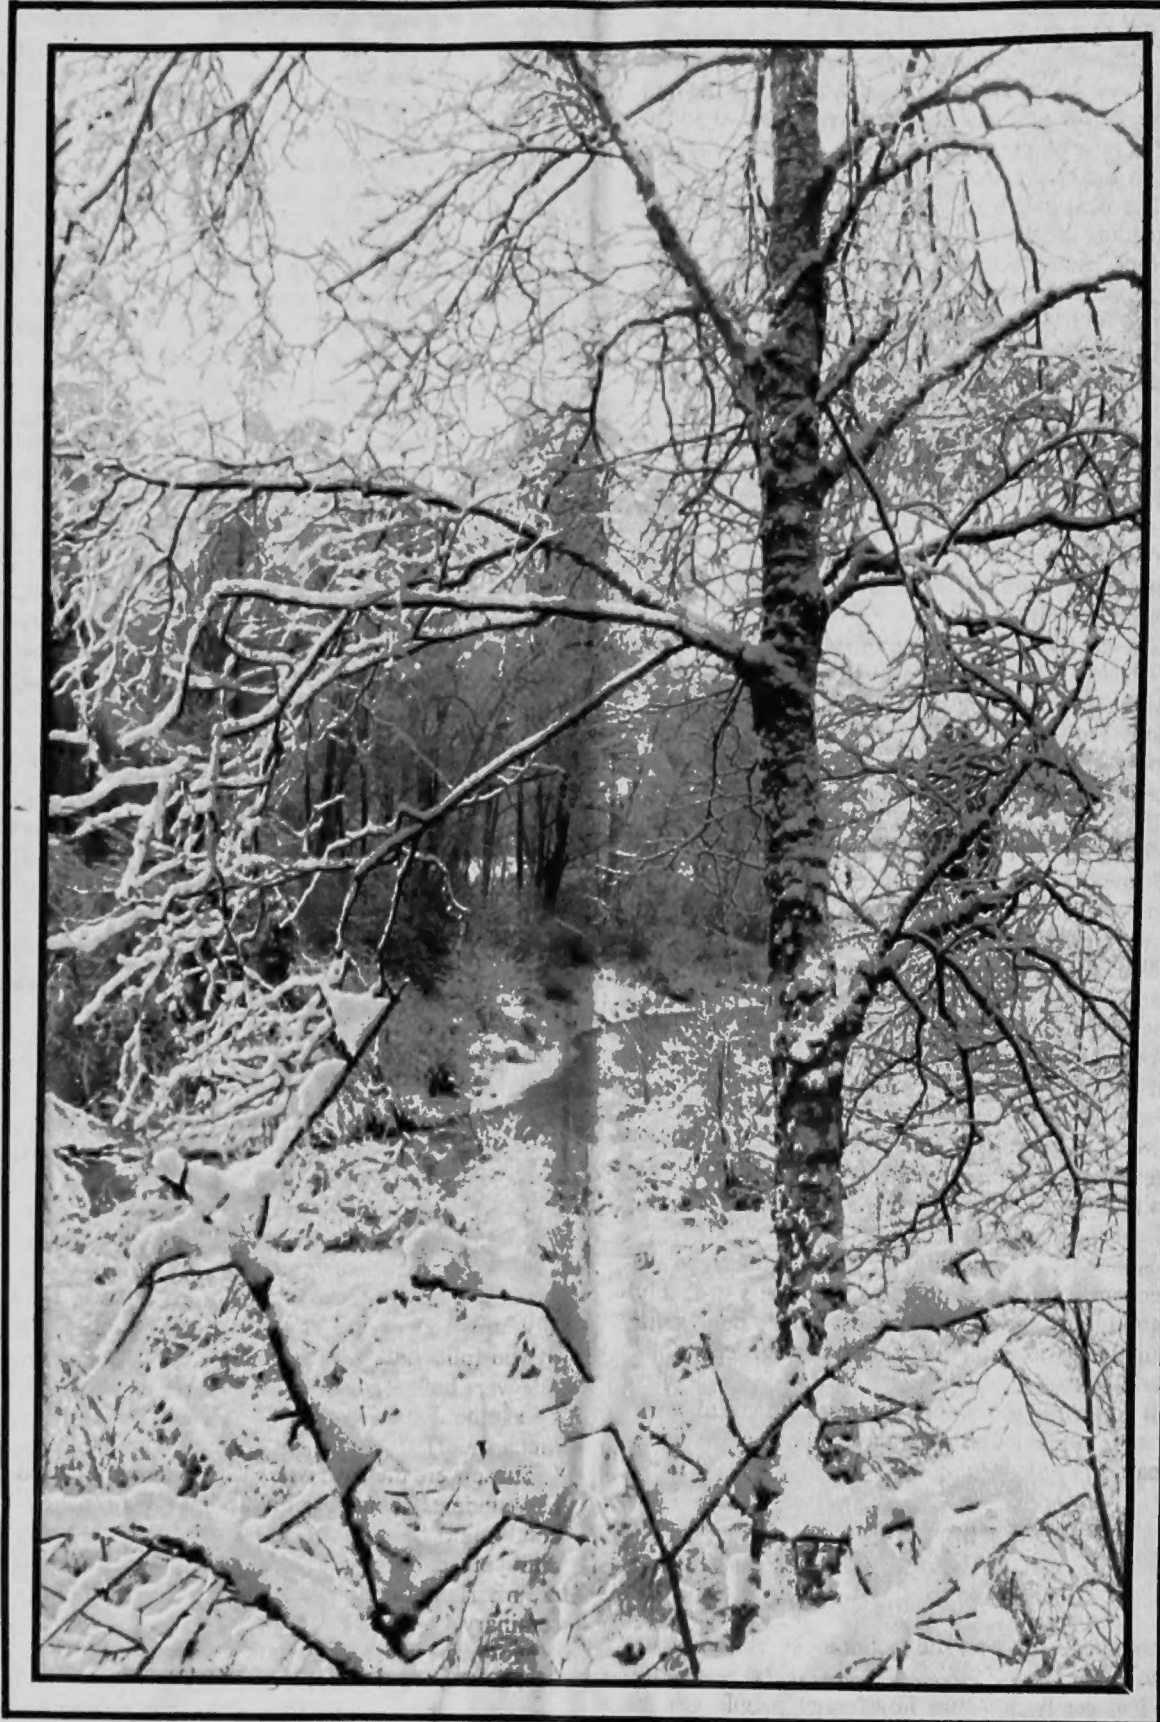

A lesser evil

Kushog Lake area property owners are facing a dilemma that in some ways, is symbolic of the tensions that surround environmental questions everywhere. The lake's property owners association is proposing an aerial spraying programme to combat the expected infestation of eastern tent caterpillars this spring. The agent used would be Bacillus thuringiensis, or Bt, which is described in a letter the association has sent to area property owners as "a naturally occurring soil bacteria compatible with the environment." It is said to be highly selective, killing only the caterpillars and harmless to other species of birds and insects, as well as to humans.

Not surprisingly, some people are uneasy with the proposal. They may doubt that what is described as harmless is totally benign. The very thought of airplanes flying low over a cottage area discharging a chemical substance, even if it is "naturally occurring", is disquieting. It is not natural for large amounts of a natural bacteria to reign down on roof tops or be carried into lakes by the first rainfall.

On the other side of the argument is a deep rooted and justifiable concern about the forests. Stressed by acid rain and all manner of human activities, the forests are less healthy than they once were. Another caterpillar infestation that strips them of their leaves may cause large tracts of forest to die, blighting the landscape for years to come.

And so the Kushog Lake area owners face the classic environmental dilemma. Caterpillar infestations are natural, occurring in cycles. Trees have survived them for centuries. But for the influence of man, whose polluting activities have put the forest under stress, there would be no need to spray at all. Yet is another kind of chemical warfare, however benign it may be, the appropriate strategy? Is its purpose to save the trees, or to protect the view? It's a debate that will not be easily resolved, and it's one that we're likely to hear a great deal more in the future.

Activities to enhance, not destroy

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Our readers write...

To the Editor:

This week's Echo carries two letters howling with outrage over last week's reasoned editorial calling for some sober thinking before we all bow down to the great god Snowmobile and pour money to build new trails into its altar.

The writers would have us all believe that there is only one thing to be considered, how best to "fight" for tourist dollars. (The word "fight" is significant in that it reveals a conflictive rather than co-operative view of society). They see everything revolving around the issue of whether the Highlands are "to continue to grow and prosper". In other words they think that money is the only thing that counts. The idea that snowmobiling should be supported by everyone just because it brings money into the country is not very convincing. Using the same logic we should be fighting to get gambling casinos or chemical waste dumps in the county because they would bring in millions of dollars. Surely no-one would claim that those industries are desirable just because they bring in money.

Yes, the basis of the county's economy is tourism and cottaging. The majority of tourists and cottagers come here to escape the roar and bustle and pollution of the city. They seek peace, quiet, rest and communion with nature, none of which is improved by the presence of snow machines. Tourists will come and spend money here whether there are snowmobile trails or not. The booming real estate market demonstrates that as city life becomes more stressful and people continue to want recreation space. The question Mr. Pizze raised is what kind of growth?

Haliburton County has great natural beauty. I would urge those who are desperate to "develop" it to consider the following words taken from a recent book on Meares Island: "Our economy bulldozes its way along in its destructive way, with few willing to listen to the need for realistic change. Like being addicted to sugar, tobacco and alcohol, people are addicted to TV, consumerism and power. With the materialistic needle in our forearm, we have become desperate for a fix, driven to excess, becoming spiritually impoverished in the process. It is easy to understand why our species is devastating the world. Self-interest and short-term economic gain have been placed higher than concern for others, or the future of the Earth."

Instead of promoting an activity which does nothing for the body or the spirit, disturbs the natural environment, uses irreplaceable natural resources for no productive end and creates needless air and noise pollution why can't Haliburton County promote activities which take advantage of our natural blessings without destroying them? Let's become the canoeing, hiking, skiing, winter-camping capital of Canada. We might even consider becoming the nation's prime bird-watching centre given that this is the most popular hobby of more North Americans than any other. Mr. Pizze's advice is sound. Let's take a long, hard look before we leap.

Shocking steroids

To the Editor:

Body building requires sweat, strength and steroids, Susan Grober reveals. Her shocking interview of two visiting "athletes" who pop dangerous drugs as casually as breath mints left me breathless.

Much worse, the Echo story conveyed not the slightest hint of condemnation against this illegal practice. In fact, it did the opposite, brazenly presenting steroid use as an acceptable athletic "go-with" as commonplace and as essential as jockstraps or hockey helmets.

No one knows steroids' long-term side effects. But if Angella Issajenko changes sex, sprouts horns, or dies young, who cares? What dismays me is the "side effect" on local high school athletes lured by Grober's misleading story into the false belief that winning is everything and that steroids guarantee success.

Pushing Ben Johnson's disgraced name as one of Canada's "best athletes" is an appalling faux pas in line with Global's telecast of a calypso group's "tribute" portraying Johnson as a "victim" of Canadian justice and his honest coach as "Judas".

When I called Echo editor Len Pizze to protest his reporter's mishandling of the story, I got another shock. Not only was Pizze well aware of the piece's shock value, he actually relied on it to shock readers into a tacit understanding that his paper describes such illegal activity as the two weight lifters openly acknowledge.

IT SEEMS LIKE ONLY YESTERDAY that we were in the middle of May, 1988 and here we are, less than a month away from the Victoria holiday weekend, 1989. Most of the business people throughout the County of Haliburton are very busy these days, erecting new buildings or adding on additions to their present business establishments. All of this, of course, is in preparation for the upcoming tourist season. All indications point to a very busy summer and I wouldn't be a bit surprised if we aren't in for a record breaking summer, both from the financial end of things and from the standpoint of the number of people who will be visiting our area during this time. To tell you the truth the economy in Ontario and in most sections of Canada is in a very healthy state and when people have money to spend we can expect that a good portion of that money will be spent here in the Highlands of Haliburton. Some of my friends who went through the depression tell me that most people don't stop to realize just how well off they really are in this day and age. We have had good times for the past few years and unless something unforeseen appears on the horizon the good times should keep on getting better.

Whenever good friends get together the subject keeps coming up on the lack of activities here in Haliburton County for young people. Some citizens who have moved into such communities as Minden and Haliburton, with the high hopes of residing here or retiring in Haliburton County, seem to miss the hustle and bustle of the larger centres, and soon move back to their former cities and towns for a wider variety of entertainment, sports and so on. Most people who move here like the area and stay here but the entire subject gives us some food for thought. We have to admit that we don't have the advantages of some of the attractions offered by larger centres, but we firmly believe that there is plenty to do here if one wants to participate. We don't have a YWCA or a YMCA or professional sports, and we may be lacking top notch entertainment, but we make up for it in many other ways. Let's take time out here to present our side of the picture. We have various organizations in the county and many of them are looking for people to help them out. We have three theatres and some of the most modern sports facilities to be found anywhere in Ontario. We have cross country skiing, downhill skiing at Sir Sam's Ski Area and excellent trails for the snowmobile enthusiast. We also have live theatre, two art galleries, and we could go on and on.

At time of writing it's hard to say just when the ice will be going out of Head Lake at Haliburton this year. It shouldn't be too much longer, but it will be later than in other years. In 1988 it was all out by April 14. The weather up until this time has been a lot cooler this April compared with the same time last year.

All persons interested in playing in the Haliburton Mixed Lob-Ball league again this summer can register at The Sports Stop in Haliburton on or before May 19.

Don't get your boat out just yet. It was snowing quite heavily here in Haliburton County last Wednesday night and we have had some flurries off and on throughout the week.

We would like to take this opportunity to welcome John and Ennis Felts and their two teenage children to the village of Haliburton. On March 30 they purchased the Lakeview Motel from Jon and Hilary Lansdowne. Mr. Felts was manager of the Bank of Montreal at Tottenham, Ontario. Jon Lansdowne is now a real estate salesman for Century 21 in Haliburton.

Keep Friday evening, April 21 open for the Spring Fashion Show presented by the Village Shoppe and Country Pickin's at the PineStone Inn and Country Club Grand Ballroom.

FRINGE BENEFITS aren't what they used to be. Not, at least, at the Jones Brewery in Smithton, Pennsylvania. No more beer on their 'coffee' breaks.

According to a news story earlier this month, the new owners of the place, (who bought it from actress Shirley Jones!) have phased out one of the traditions that went with working at the 82-year-old brewery.

Seems they got a 20-minute break to slip into the plant taproom for two free foamy glasses in mid-morning and mid-afternoon. This was in addition to the free suds with lunch and at the end of the shift.

They'll still get the lunch and afterwork freebees, and to make up for the 'coffee' breaks, they've been offered their choice of work uniforms paid for by the company, two free take-home cases a month, or the cash equivalent.

Nothing in the story mentions a union, and this is amazing. The Brewery Workers Union is a toughy, and when I was packaging brew for Carling's in Waterloo in the late 40s, our free beer benefits were part of the negotiated union package.

The building had been the famous Kuntz Brewery, not far from Seagram's, and is now owned by Labatt's. Judging from a brief look at the operation on TV news during a story on upcoming taxation proposals, a lot of what I did back then has been automated.

My stint in the composing room of the Kitchener Record, followed by a few months on the streets selling advertising, had me convinced I was ready to move on to the world of advertising agencies, but I wasn't earning enough to build a stake to go out into the world.

The paper wouldn't put me on commission, so I chose to turn in the suit and the $30 a week salary for work clothes and a job that paid at least $1.25 an hour. Thanks to the unions, they gave bonuses for night shifts, time-and-a-half after 40 hours, and double time on Sundays and Holidays.

In those days those were big bucks, and even though I was under the legal drinking age of the day (which was twenty-one), and too new to join the union, I got my punch card for my beer allotment—two bottles for lunch, two at shift's end.

It was hard, hot work in an old-fashioned factory building, and in many ways, I think it was part of an attempt to keep the employees from drinking on the line, where many still found it easy to scoff a beer and down it at a gulp on a hot August afternoon.

The jobs were so mind-numbing, they rotated them every half-hour so you could keep your attention span intact. One-third of my job was as a 'packer,' sitting at a machine while six rows of beer bottles clunked down the line to end up at eye-level in front of me in a rack.

I stepped on a pedal, a case was lifted up to the rack and 24 bottles fell into the case. The weight lowered the unit and as you gave the box a shove to the left, rollers carried it along to a machine that glued the cases shut.

The next half-hour you 'set up' for the packer, spreading the flaps on 24s. However, if they ran 12s or 6-packs (still known in the trade as 'schoolboys'), you had to clip two 12s together with spring-metal clips. With 6s, there were four clips.

The machine was designed to dispense 24 bottles, and while setting up was a snap with full cases, the handling for the other sizes really made you move. Some people couldn't cope, and the whole line would have to be shut down so they could catch up.

I don't know how they handle the partial packs these days, but on TV, the packing was all done by the machine, no hands. I always felt sure, even back then, that it could have been adjusted to at least drop 12s instead of 24s.

The third half-hour of the shift was in some ways the easiest, and in other ways the toughest. Very simply, you sat on a high, backless stool, staring into a foot-wide magnifying glass, as an endless supply of freshly-filled beer bottles passed between it and a bright white light box.

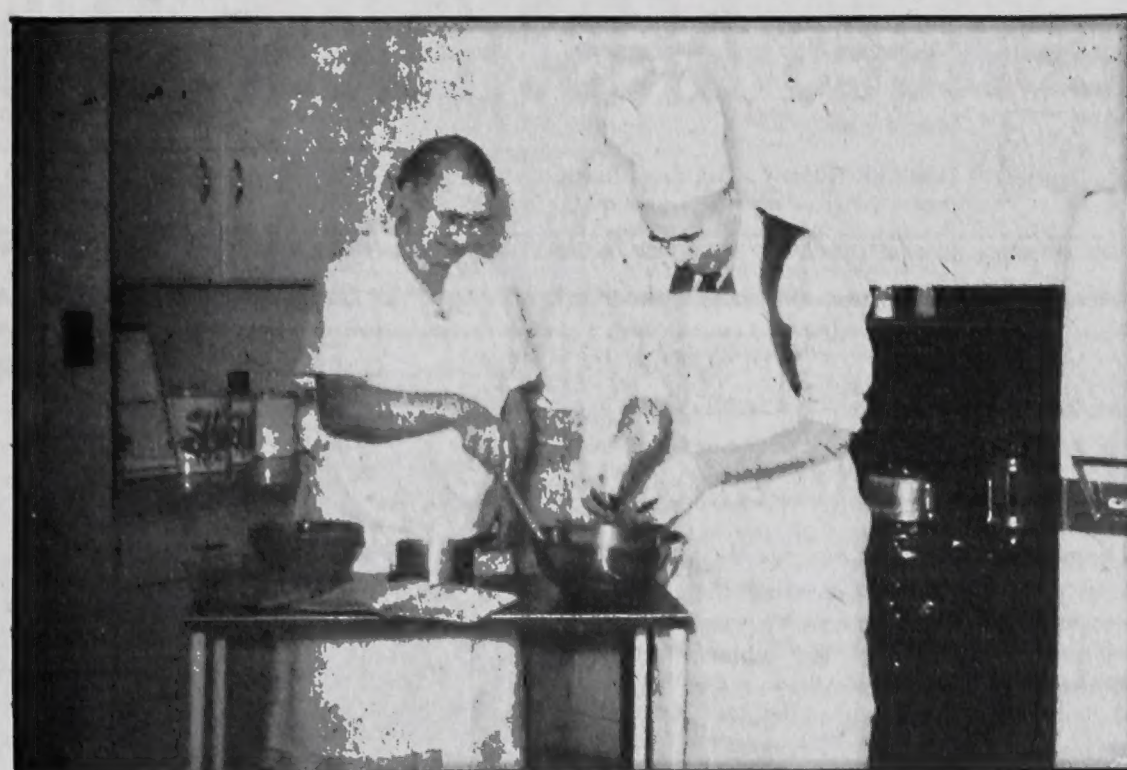

In addition to carefully examining the content of each bottle, you were expected to keep an eye on the row of bottles to the right of you as they passed along. Because part of the responsibility was to make sure the bottles were full enough.

The filling-capping machines would ever so gradually get out of adjustment, putting a few drops less beer in each bottle. You couldn't tell looking at one, but if you checked a line of 30 or 40 strung out in a row, you could see the fill-line gradually creeping down.

Many an overnight shift at two or three in the morning, I would practically nod off, staring at the bright white light, only to be jerked awake as I started to fall of the stool...

Somehow, I imagine they have managed to mechanize this function as well, and it's probably a good thing. I don't think most human beings are equipped to do a 100% job on such boring, repetitious work.

It was a dull job, but an interesting place to work when I was that age. And the fringe benefits were great...

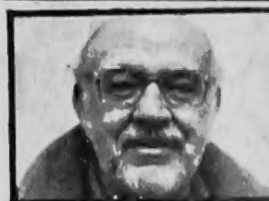

Pic of the Past

In June 1954 plans for an outpost hospital in Minden were completed and a local campaign was organized to raise a minimum of $13,000. The balance was provided by grants from the provincial and federal governments and the Red Cross Society. On June 29, 1955 the Minden Red Cross Hospital was officially opened by Premier Leslie M. Frost, assisted by the president of the Minden Red Cross, Mr. Archie Stouffer, Mr. L.M. Stringer, commissioner of Ontario Red Cross, and Miss Ida Brand, director. After the December Red Cross meeting, a few months after the Minden Hospital was opened, the president, Archie Stouffer helped Mrs. Reynolds prepare the Christmas cake.

WELL, NOW THAT all the local fuss is over about John and Velma Smith leaving for Chatham, I need to brag a little.

You see, I knew the Rev. John Smith before any of you folks did! Yep! It goes back to 1956-1959. We were both at MacMaster Divinity College at the same time. John was a year or two ahead of me (he's much older).

Those were the days when L.C. Kitchen lectured new students about sex. First point: "Don't." Second point: "If you are single now, stay that way until you are out of seminary." Third point: "If you are married, do not have children while you are in seminary."

Most who were single got married right away. Those who were married had babies as often and as fast as they could. John didn't do either. We wondered about John.

When I went to play football (Russ Jackson was in his senior year), they told me about the only other Theology student who had played on the university football team: John Smith. They added, "Of course he broke his leg!" I didn't. But then John's always been fatter as well as older!

"Nate" Parker taught us Hebrew Bible with a Mississippi drawl. We came to love the Israelites spoke that way. We came to think the folks of the Old Testament through Nate. He fished in the summer up near Dorset. He came to Haliburton to hear John preach each summer, hoping John would come through. He didn't.

Harold Lang taught New Testament with a kind, gentle spirit like a Sunday School teacher. His silver-grey hair and wide perceptive eyes somehow made you always think that he knew a whole lot more than he was telling. Unlike Harold, John didn't.

G.P. Albaugh taught Church History. The story went around that because Albaugh taught with such a rapid-fire pace, when John dropped his pencil he missed two centuries of notes!

Then there was Prof. Oldwinkle, who wore grey spats and taught systematic theology. John's class was kind of dull. They taught Oldwinkle to sigh a lot and finally take a sabbatical leave. My class then had a fire-brand preacher named Ed Checkland, who looked and sounded more like Jeremiah than anyone I've ever met. He often smelled more like Amos.

Gerry Hallup tried to teach John Greek and Hebrew. He got by. Harrup I mean. John got out. Arthur Poynter, of blessed memory, taught voice and church music to John, or tried to. John just couldn't quit laughing when Poynter directed him. So he slipped by there too — since laughter is contagious.

When we came to Haliburton we got to know John all over again. It wasn't too hard. He hasn't changed much. I do wish Nate Parker could have heard John in his old age (John's) — I think he has come through.

You may want to know that John's induction service at Chatham Baptist Church is on Tuesday evening, June 27, at 7:30 p.m. They're having a very famous preacher that night, younger and slimmer than John, who will be proud to be there.

New age weaving: it's in the bag

NORTHERN LIGHTS

Virginia
Muenzel

HOW DO YOU GET HAM from a chicken? It's easy. You just lend Ed a video camera, and he'll tape everything in sight.

It was another one of those weekends. From having the trailer that was to deliver the sweat lodge frame to the PineStone Inn decide to take a side trip on its own, to watching the men Wendy and I live with parading down a ramp in front of over 200 people, wearing plastic loin cloths, it could best be described as strange.

It was also an exercise in happy education. While everyone was rolling with laughter, they were learning about novelty yarns. And then we snuck in a subtle lesson in ecology.

Our own Fred and Fritz Future Fabric were making a point that we hoped would dawn on at least a few minds while they were enjoying themselves. The point being that, if human kind continues in its present fashion, we may arrive at a time when all the sheep are gone from the fields, when all the balls of cotton and all the flaxheads have withered and died. A point when we could find ourselves with nothing left to weave our clothing from except the remnants of our plastic technology. The weave of the future.

I'm really not sure how many people got the message. A couple of folks were feeling and examining the Sweat Lodge for several minutes before they finally noticed that there was "some plastic in those blankets". Those of us who are trying to break old habits are finding the going tough. We feel we should be wearing banners when we shop. NO PLASTIC BAGS PLEASE! It's just as much our fault as the stores'. We have to remember to take our own bags with us. We have to remember to hand them to the clerks. We have to remember to thank them when we get paper bags.

One woman at the OHS conference asked me how long it took us to get enough plastic bags to weave those seven 20 foot long blankets. She was surprised to hear that once the world got around, we had our 4,000 bags in about a week and a half. The fact is, we can't seem to stem the flow. We probably have enough of the darned things to weave another whole lodge. It didn't take any effort to get them. That's the point. Don't you see? They're everywhere!

Even at our most efficient, we can't come home from a shopping trip without plastic. It's maddening. So, I guess the next best thing is to encourage people who are making the effort to recycle it. And apparently, there is someone around here thinking about doing just that. Wouldn't that be wonderful? Then Wendy and I could dump Fred and Fritz, go back to weaving with real fibres, and get those awful balls of plastic out of our lives.

Pausing to listen to life's sounds

THROUGH THE PERISCOPE

THE CANADA GEESE'S HONKING broke through the silence of the quiet sunset. Far away, close to its two friends, its long neck could be seen to undulate as he shouted his message to anyone who was there to listen.

Soaring above them, the heron seemed to pay no attention to these other recently-returned lakeside compatriots. Had he misjudged the weather and arrived too soon? His eyes missed nothing as he stalked the water's edge looking for food, but perhaps there was nothing to miss.

Two startled ducks shot out into the air, their wings beating at an incredible pace. Once airborne, they moved with the speed of a torpedo, eager to get somewhere without seeming to know exactly where they were going. Finally they decided to land. Their horizontal bodies inclined towards the sky, their wings opened up and they hit the water, remarkably slowing down to a gentle meandering in just a couple of metres.

Ra-ta-ta-tat went the woodpeckers in the far off woods, there being no leaves to mute their loud tattoo. Could one be a pileated woodpecker, with the bright red crown and tail feathers which fanned out like a Victorian hat? Alas, you couldn't see any movement and you just had to guess what life their was beyond your range.

In five minutes outside, you can be filled with wonder in Haliburton. So much is going on—so much living—that it's incredible there's still room for any human activity. But in order to enjoy nature's orchestra of sounds, and its opera of drama, you have to know how to do nothing. All you have to do is stand there and be aware.

This, however, sometimes seems to be a hard task for people. It's difficult to know how to be silent. You can't expect anything to happen, but when it

"ARE THERE ANY CRITTERS down there?" he asked with a nervous smile.

"Critters? You mean like animals?" she answered uncertainly. "I don't see how any animal could get in there. It's all closed up."

Obviously not satisfied with this reply, he explained further. "I mean the six legged kind of critter. Are there any of those down there?"

The real thing he was referring to spiders. He had a she realized about spiders. No other insect bothered him and she doubted whether any animal, unless it was rabid, could instill the sheer terror that a spider did to this man.

The reason the topic of spiders had even come up, because he did not like talking about them at all, was the problem in the basement. It wasn't a regular basement really, more of a foundation wall. It had a dirt floor and you'd have to be a very short person to stand up in the middle of it. It also had a sump pump. That was the problem.

With all the rain and spring run off, water was flowing everywhere, including into the basement. This was expected. But what was neither expected nor understood was why the sump pump had turned into the monster below. It had been booming and snorting and chugging almost non-stop for two days and two nights. The whole house shook to its thunderous noise, and like a growling dragon under the house, the roar of its pumping drowned out any chance of normal living.

It ruined conversation because people got tired of shouting after awhile. The phone became useless because you couldn't hear the person on the other end of the line. If you turned up the TV or stereo, the noise level in the house could only be tolerated for a short time. The dogs, at first terrified, had tried to cower the monster by barking long and hard at its threatening sounds. When that didn't work they gave and were reduced to pacing nervously about the house, trying to get away from it. The clamour would stop just long enough for a person to start dozing off into desperately needed sleep. Then with a boom it would start up again, gurgling and growling beneath the house, making any sleep impossible. It had to be fixed.

Never having been in the basement, he wasn't sure what to expect. But taking pity on his girlfriend's darkly circled eyes and nervously twitching hands — stress can do terrible things to people — he agreed to take a look.

There was no flashlight, so he brought his extension light and plugged it into the outside outlet. With trepidation, he removed the boards that covered the opening in the foundation. The hole was the size and shape of a small window. It was just big enough for an average size person to squeeze through in a prone position. He looked at the mud and wet remnants of snow covering the ground near the hole and decided to slide in on his stomach, feet first, and pull the light in afterwards. Crouching down on his knees to begin the descent, he felt as though he was about to enter the black hole of Calcutta.

His feet hung in mid-air for a moment as he struggled to find the dirt floor. He had no idea how far down in the dark he'd have to go before hitting solid ground. Something touched his foot but it felt spongy, uneven. He persevered, lowering the rest of his body into the hole and quickly dragging the light in after himself. Looking down, now that he had light, he saw that the spongy, uneven object his foot had first landed upon was an old piece of styrofoam insulation. That little mystery solved, he turned around to look for the offending sump pump.

As he turned, he took a step forward and walked right into a cobweb. With horror he stepped back again, strands of sticky cobweb slinging to his face. Then his eyes widened as he found himself face to face with the spinner of the web. The spider dangle-

Peewees blast Lucan to bring home Ontario title

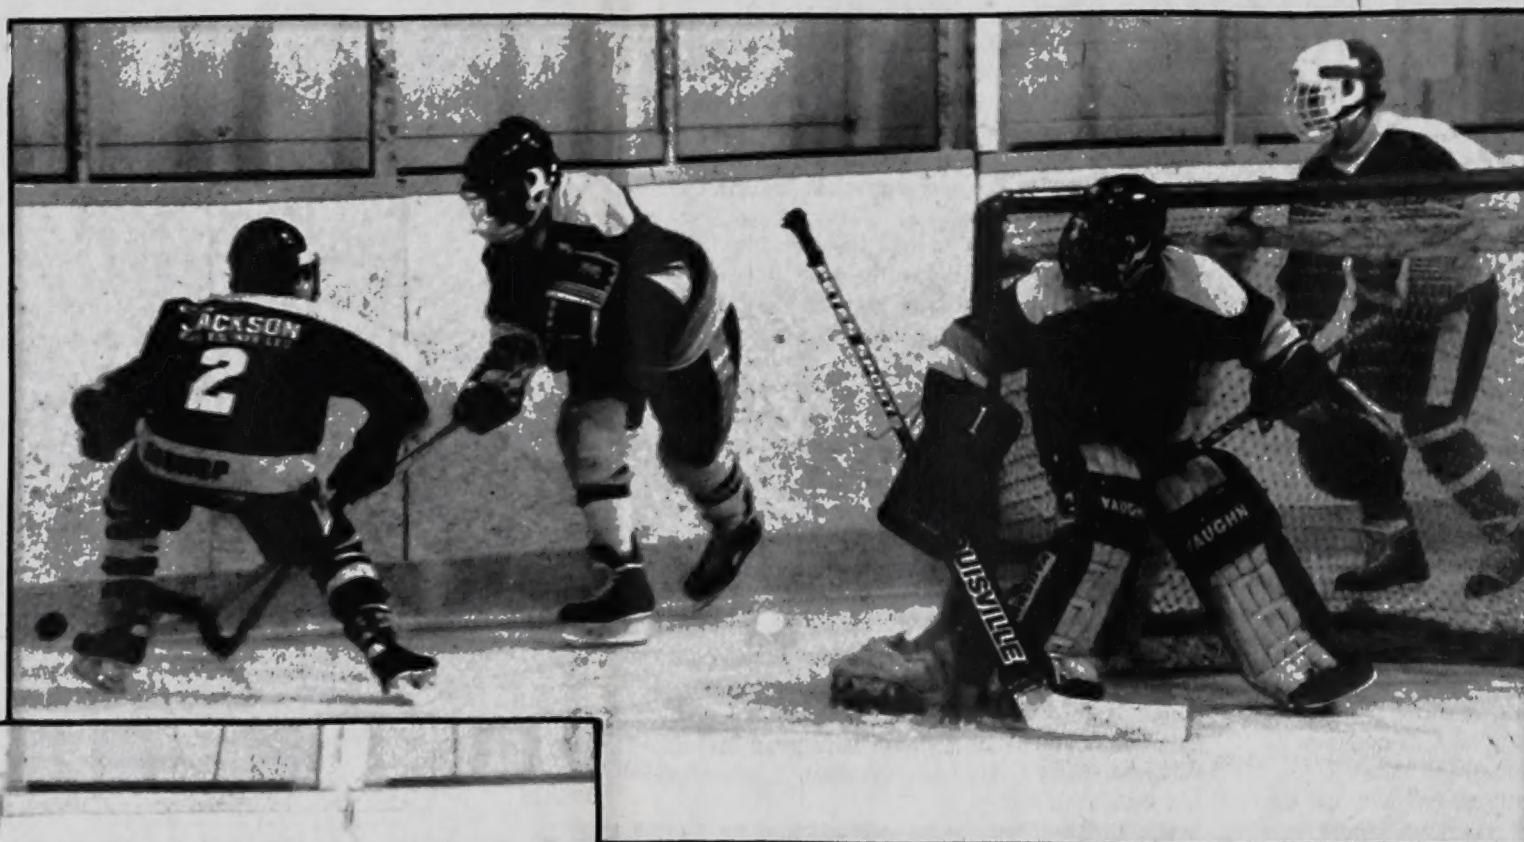

by LEN PIZZEY

Editor

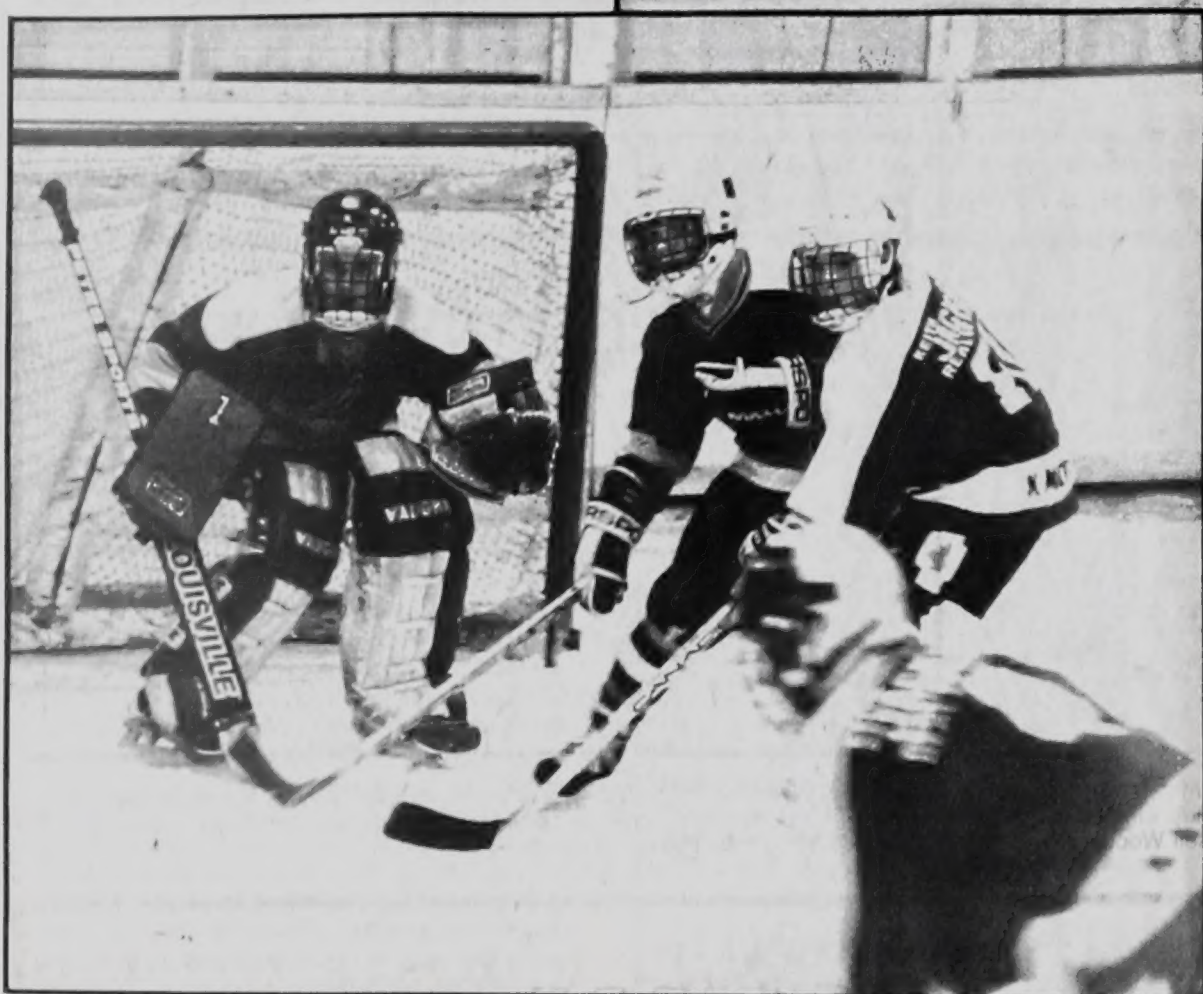

Haliburton's OMHA Keith Jackson Real Estate Peewees powered their way to an all Ontario championship over the weekend, dominating a Lucan team who couldn't figure out how to defend itself against Haliburton's hard charging forwards.

The series had been close through four games, with the teams trading wins at home and away. Game five on Saturday was the pivotal contest, and Haliburton was determined to give the home town fans who jammed the Dysart arena what they wanted. Even the keenest observers were surprised by the extent of Haliburton's domination. Lucan, perhaps tired out by the five hour bus ride, were lacklustre in every respect, while Haliburton pressed the attack, chalking nine goals to take a 9-1 victory.

Lucan might have expected to come back in the Sunday game, bolstered by home ice and their own fans, but the Haliburton team, many of whom had come very close to winning the all Ontario Atom title last year, only to lose in overtime of the deciding match, had other ideas. They shut out Lucan completely to win 5-0 and head home to take the traditional victory ride on the Dysart fire truck and hang another blue and gold championship banner in the Dysart arena.

Haliburton came out strongly in game five, showing the skating and play making skills that helped them dominate their league throughout the season. Coach Paul Morissette's game plan was to shut down the Lucan offense and take the lead quickly, and his players did exactly that.

Mike Billings score just 21 seconds after the opening faceoff with help from Mark Stamp and less than two minutes later, Kevin Morissette teamed up with his twin brother Mark to give Haliburton a two goal lead.

With 7:13 remaining, Kevin got his second of the game, assisted by Greg Stamp.

Lucan's only goal came with six seconds left in the period.

Haliburton dominated play in the second period as well, foiling all of Lucan's attempts at play making.

Two goals in 10 seconds a little over a minute into the period all but put the game out of Lucan's reach, as Greg Stamp and Kevin Morissette pressed the score to 4-1 and 5-1 respectively.

The sixth goal wasn't long in coming either, as Kevin Morissette blasted in a shot from 30 feet out.

Haliburton kept the puck in the Lucan zone, and killed the few penalties that were assessed, ragging and icing the puck effectively.

With 4:38 left in the period Haliburton's pressure on a power play paid off as Jeff Black scored from Corbie Kent and Mark Morissette.

Kent made it 8-1 with a little over two minutes remaining on the period when he banged in the rebound off a shot from defenseman Jeff Black.

Even with a commanding lead Haliburton kept pressing, and almost got another when a shot across the goalmouth hit the post and bounced out.

Haliburton coasted a little in the third period, taking the play away from Lucan but not adding anything to the score until Mike Billings connected on a shot from the blueline to make it 9-1.

Right after the game, players and their parents headed off to Kitchener, where the boys could get a good night's rest before driving the final hour or so to the Lucan arena.

With their backs to the wall the Lucan team attempted in the first few minutes of play to throw their weight around but Haliburton was not intimidated.

The period ended scoreless, although Haliburton

Curlers wrap up season at banquet

Trophies presented to season, playoff winners

Haliburton's top curlers got a chance to look back on their successful seasons on Saturday night as the community's curling club held its annual banquet and trophy presentations.

On the ladies side, the rink of Emily LaRue, Anne Ollikainen, Ruth Schell and Chantal Thurston finished in first place in regular schedule play, and earned the Beall Trophy. In the playoff round the winners were the rink of Linda Beachli, Lise Ainsley, Gaynor Goldring and Ursula Beachli. They were presented with the Aileen Curry Trophy.

On the men's side, schedule winners Gary Bailey, Maurice McKee and Kirk Harrison received the Hughes Trophy, while the Gilliam Trophy went to mens playoff winners Bob MacNaull, Gord Pierson, Glen Blair and Stu Timbers.

Five trophies also were presented to various winners in mixed league curling.

The Beachli Trophy, awarded to the winners of the Tuesday 7 p.m. schedule, went to the rink of Larry Rosenberg, Dave Schellenberg, Laraine Forgrave and Betty Curry.

The Varty Trophy for the Tuesday 9 p.m. schedule was awarded to the rink of Art Dawson, David Rogers, Sandra Oakley and Heather Timbers.

Wednesday schedule winners Paul Marlin, John Cawker, Linda Marlin and Hilary Lansdowne earned the Elstone Trophy.

The Bank of Montreal Trophy was presented to playoff winners Art Dawson, David Rogers, Sandra Oakley and Heather Timbers.

Mixed B division winners were Ron Barr, Jane Rosenberg, John Watson and Ann Martino for the 7 p.m. draw, and Raymond Scott, Sheila Popple, Murray Burton and Laurie Devolin for the 9 p.m. draw.

There were also awards for rinks who came out on top of the fall schedule. Winners were: Ladies schedule — Emily LaRue, Ruth Curry, Linda Marlin, Chantal Thurston; Men's schedule — Dave Gray, Ed Pickard, John Cawker, John Carr; Tuesday 7 p.m. mixed — Larry Rosenberg, Barb Schellenberg, Phil Martino, Kathy Lloyd; Tuesday 9 p.m. mixed — Phyllis Woodcock, Don Popple, Don Cameron, Linda Schadbolt; Jon Lansdowne, Sheila Stackhouse, Ben Hunt, Anne Rowe; Wednesday mixed — Clark Bailey, Barb Wood, Lew Brown, and Janet Bottom.

Kushog spraying debate shows high environmental awareness to the waterline, any spraying back from the water line implies you plan to spray on our property, not yours... Why would you think we would be so foolish as to want it in our drinking water.

"We believe the onus is on you to spray only on your property and there is no onus on us to assist you in determining your property line."

"In this light, if you spray, we demand detector paper supplied and installed by you before spraying. We will then arrange for testing of this paper at your expense."

"I appreciate that position and respect their right to make their own decision," says Marie Thomson, KLPOA environment chairman, in a telephone interview. She also understands why some councillors at the meeting expressed doubts about the insecticide's suitability in a lakeside, residential area. In the past with other sprays, "they say they don't hurt us and 20 years later they tell us to watch out," said Murray Daniels.

No tax increase to fund airport

But Stanhope ratepayers will not feel the pinch of the $1-million pricetag, Davis said. By negotiating with the federal Ministry of Transport, the township was able to attain a $790,000 grant, whereas the province would only offer 80 per cent of the funding costs. However, Ontario has come through with $170,000 in additional funding and the township is left with $40,000, "which isn't too bad on a $1-million investment."

Because the $40,000 is already in a reserve fund, there will be no increase in the mill rate to cover the project.

Before the project was approved, the airport committee was involved with property acquisition, a cost benefit study, a soil investigation and an environmental evaluation study.

Engineers have been retained and Davis expects the tender to be awarded some time in June.

The township office has received several calls about the program, all of them negative, but Thomson says that of the almost 200 replies she has received, the ratio is approximately 13 to one in favour of the spraying. Others have phoned her saying their responses are in the mail, and she expects these to be positive as well.

However, "if someone doesn't answer, then we have to assume they don't want it. But the people who do want it, really want it badly."

When she first started investigating the possibility of a spray program, "I didn't believe in spraying anything." But since talking to various agencies, I've done a turnaround in my own thinking."

The insecticide Bt is endorsed by both the federal and provincial ministries of the environment. Upon being contacted by Thomson, Greenpeace said it had no position about Bt and directed her to the National Coalition Against Misuse of Pesticides. It and Pollution Probe said it didn't have any problems with the use of Bt, Thomson says.

"All the people who you'd expect to say 'Don't use it', are saying 'Yes, it's a safe product.'"

As to concerns about it getting into the water system, Thomson says she's been told it would be so diluted, it wouldn't cause any problems. It will also bio-degrade in seven days.

The Martin brothers' letter "made me feel really badly. I don't want there to be ill feelings or animosity." If the project does go ahead, she says she'll gladly mark their property again and that even she does not like the tone of wording which asks uninterested property owners to to help trees resist the stresses facing them.

"The trees are the main concern. People will say the trees will bounce back but they've never had so many forces to contend with at the same time, never as many pollutants."

"Another thing I'm concerned about is that we're critical of the people along the Amazon (cutting down trees and therefore reducing the world's supply of oxygen) but how mark their own boundaries.

"If anybody is adamant (against spraying their property), we won't do the adjoining property either. That seems to be the sensible approach," although the other property owners might not be pleased.

"It's an unknown how effective this is going to be," she adds, but feels that something must be done can we be critical if we don't do our part?" By saving trees, property owners are protecting at least one source of oxygen. "We need to be thinking we'll do whatever we can to help the trees."

The association is now facing the difficult decision of whether to go ahead with the spraying. Thomson wonders how they can respect the rights of people who don't want their property sprayed as well of those who believe it's their responsibility to help the trees. "I'm not too sure how we can do that. You can't make everyone happy."

Despite the sometimes belligerent callers expressing dissatisfaction (one woman told Thomson she was just another person "from the city" who was upset she couldn't lie out on her beach for a week), Thomson has been heartened by the level of environmental awareness people have.

"The best thing for me personally is knowing there are so many people who are environmentally concerned. I'm really gratified to find out the number of people who care."

"I wish them all the best whichever way they go," says the MNR's management forester, Peter Hynard, who believes a consensus is very difficult to reach since people have very strong views one way or the other.

The MNR's position is to act as advisors in such debates. "It's their decision to make" but they can help by providing information about timing, spraying methods and "what would happen if they did or did not spray."

MNR not spraying

"The MNR will not be spraying this year because it's unnecessary for us to do so in order for us to meet our timber management objectives," Hynard says. "We know the infestation causes damage and tree mortality, nonetheless, the forest will still be here" after the caterpillars leave.

As well, for the MNR to spray crown land—it did do some ground spraying in provincial parks last year but will not do so again—"it would cost us an absolute fortune" and the benefits would be minimal.

However, he does recognize that cottage and lakeside owners would have a different perspective. "If you own a quarter of a million acres, as we do, a tree has a value but not the same value as if it were beside your cottage."

And while cottagers such as Thomson may have the tree's health as their uppermost concern, last year's phone calls showed that "many cottagers feel strongly about the nuisance value. They call here all the time, and they find the caterpillars very, very objectionable."

With an onslaught of Gypsy Moths on its way, the MNR is saving its money for a spray program when this pest arrives because unlike the tent caterpillar, it does not have any natural predators.

But Gary Clements, the MNR's extension technician, warns that the cure might be as bad as the cure in nuisance value.

The forest tent caterpillar's naturally occurring parasite is the flesh fly, which lays a living maggot on the cocoons. The maggot paralyzes the pupae and eats them before going into the cocoon stage itself. When the eggs hatch, the "friendly flies" seem to congregate around human heads.

"They don't bite but they're a real nuisance," says Clements. "But at least they don't defoliate trees."

He saw areas around the Deep Bay Road where the flesh fly maggots had destroyed 80 to 90 per cent of caterpillar cocoons "so that's a good sign."

(When it comes to Eastern tent caterpillars, which build their silken tents in the crooks of tree branches, Clements says that if you rip the tents open on a damp, cool night, the caterpillars will not survive.)

However, if KLPOA wants to have a spray program, it will have to act fast, he says. Eggs will hatch as soon as buds on the trees open and then once a week, they will shed their coat. It's best to spray the Bt after the third shedding but before they grow much bigger. Because there's a lot of ministry paperwork involved, the association will have to put the wheels in motion very soon in order to be able to spray on time.

KLPOA will be making its decision later this week.

Stanhope blamed for accident when road washed out

by MARTHA PERKINS

Staff Reporter

Stanhope council has been advised it may be held responsible for costs incurred in an accident along St. Peter's Road two weeks ago.

On Wednesday April 5, at an unknown time, Barbara Ramsay was travelling along the road when her car fell into a portion of the road which had been washed away by flooding. Damage to the car was estimated at $3,000.

If someone is considering taking action against the municipality, it must be notified within 10 days of the accident. At last Wednesday's council meeting, council received a letter from Ramsay's lawyer stating such action may be considered.

Roads superintendent Harold Barjarow said that when he drove along the road at 5:15 on Tuesday night, there was no sign of a washout. But at 7:00 p.m., he received a call from the OPP saying Ruth and Barry Haywood had been in an accident when their car hit the washout on the road.

When Barjarow went to put up road closing signs shortly after the phone call, "I never saw such a fog," he told council. He first put some signs up before the St. Peter's bridge, but when he walked back to his truck, 25 feet away, he could not see the signs so he removed them to a site where the fog had cleared. Other signs were placed at the Highway 118 entrance to the road.

"That night, it wasn't even safe for me to be out," Barjarow said. "I was scared to death all the time I was out—you couldn't see the front end of your car."

Because he is unable to predict exactly where a washout will occur, and the road was closed after the first accident, Barjarow said "there was nothing I could do to prevent (the Ramsay accident.)"

Council has not received further notice from Ramsay's lawyer.

Your Business

In the interest of enhancing the business climate in the Highlands, the Haliburton County Development Corporation is pleased to sponsor this informative business-oriented column. The material in this report was prepared by the Small Business Branch of the Ontario Ministry of Industry, Trade and Technology.

WRITING A BUSINESS PLAN

Trying to start a business without a proper business plan is like trying to travel through uncharted territory without a map. Pretty tricky to figure out where you're going.

It is critical, in fact, to have a comprehensive business plan for a number of reasons. Unless you have a clear, written profile of the company's expected performance and prospects, it's virtually impossible to get any financial backing, apart from family largess. What's more, putting it all down on paper makes it easier to judge whether the venture is sound to begin with. And once you're established, the plan serves as a good reference to track performance.

Although it's not a legal requirement, a formal business plan is pretty well deemed mandatory by the financial community. Gary Angst, a consultant in the Small Business Branch of the Ontario Ministry of Industry, Trade and Technology, points out that it's foolish to approach a banker with only some preliminary calculations. "Some people actually jot numbers on a napkin or on the back of a cigarette package; not surprisingly, they don't get more than the time of day from the banks," he says.

Angst covers the province each year giving numerous seminars to prospective entrepreneurs on how to develop a sound business plan. "A typical business plan begins with a summary of your operation, your idea, the market need, the amount of capital required and the projected financial results," explains Angst. "Your plan must make sense on paper before you dip into your wallet and get involved in a business."

Graham Cunningham, an accountant and senior partner with Toronto-based G.G. Cunningham & Associates Inc., is convinced there's a definite correlation between a valid business plan and commercial success. "In your business plan, you should make a yearly sales forecast," advises Cunningham. "Then, compare your monthly cash flow with your projections. Although there will always be some variance, you can red flag a problem right away."

Based on his long experience as a management consultant to small business, Cunningham cautions against one fairly common problem in drafting business plans. Often, he says, owner-managers are too optimistic when forecasting sales. Figures may be pulled out of thin air or calculated to narrowly using spreadsheet software. "Sales forecasts are virtually meaningless if you don't calculate the profit spread for each product line," says Cunningham.

To help you create a valid business plan, the Small Business Branch of the Ministry of Industry, Trade and Technology provides three low-cost, comprehensive guide books that cover business planning for the manufacturing, retailing and service sectors. These booklets contain forms to be filled out. Once completed, they provide a blueprint of your management, marketing and financial capabilities, solid groundwork on which potential investors can build.

Adult decisions not easy, student councillors discover

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Approval has been granted for construction of a skateboard park, new trucks for the fire and road departments and moving the recycling container at the Scotch Line landfill site closer to the superintendent's building for improved supervision—all decided in less than an hour by Minden's new council.

If you're wondering when you missed the election of this new group of super-efficient council members, you should know that a group of Archie Stouffer Elementary School students staged a mock council meeting last Thursday in honour of Local Government Awareness Week.

The regular Anson, Hindon and Minden council members were more than willing to watch the students' version in their "irregular" meeting, complete with agenda and copies of letters from concerned residents. Employees from the municipality rounded out the cast of characters.

Reeve Meaghan Obee was joined by Deputy Reeve Grant Wilson, Clerk-Treasurer Bobbi Griffith (who scribbled furiously in a little notebook during the proceedings) and councillors Max Weber, Jennifer Oitment and Andrew Shapcott.

Before the meeting, Max Weber, decked out in a white jacket and tie, was asked if he felt nervous at all about his new job as councillor. "Me, nervous? No!" he exclaimed, voice breaking. Reeve Ray Moore shouted out, "You'd do anything to get out of school, wouldn't you?" "Yup, we would," Weber agreed with new-found confidence.

Although many would think the students had a lot to learn before preparing the mock council meeting, 12-year-old Grant Wilson says he learned a little bit about speaking out in the community when he wrote a letter to editor of The Times, after a suggestion from his parents.

"I wrote a letter about dog dung," he says. "I said that there should be some bylaw that prevents dogs to be allowed in the school yard. A lot of people talked to me about it and said it was a great letter—it's kind of annoying to slide into first base, and then realize it's not first base at all. And it smells up the house."

Although the students were well-prepared, they did have to face a few glitches, but for the most part the council meeting ran smoothly.

Members of the first delegation to appear before council were Ted Pipe and Jarrett Wright, two skateboarders requesting a skateboard park. In a letter to council, Pipe and Wright stated "skateboarding is a recognized and growing sport, however, it is dangerous for us when we are using the same streets and sidewalks as motorists and pedestrians. We cannot expect drivers to worry about us."

Minden resident Ms. L. Jones (Carol Mowatt) agreed with Pipe and Wright in her presentation to council. In a letter she stated, "children riding skateboards through our town are a problem. They ride them very quickly on the sidewalk, and don't stop for anybody."

Although Deputy Reeve Wilson expressed concern that a skateboard park would "take quite a bit of money," council agreed the money could be raised through fundraising efforts.

In the second delegation to council, Dawn Warburton said she was pleased with the township's actions in bringing a recycling bin to the Scotch Line dump, but expressed concern that many residents aren't using the bin correctly.

"They have been putting their Javex bottles in the PET section, fine paper in the newspaper section and motor oil containers in the can section. I have been asked before what to do with the extra envelopes, plastic containers and other items that cannot be put in the bin," read Warburton's letter to council.

She asked that signs be put up specifying items to be put in the bin, and recommended a public education campaign using posters and flyers. Warburton also asked that council request the bin be moved closer to the shelter kept by the "man that runs the dump" by Muskoka Containerized Services, so he could ensure that all garbage placed in the bin is can be recycled.

Council agreed unanimously to consider Warburton's recommendations, as long as students hold bake sales and raffles to help cover any costs.

New arena roof needed

Presentations to council began with arena manager Brian Sisson, who asked for $70,000 to help finance repairs to the community centre roof.

"We've already spent money on plans, and we'll lose a $17,000 grant from the province if we don't act right away," said Sisson, who added, "you have to excuse me, I've got a cold from mopping the water from the floor." Sisson warned council that the roof is in such bad shape that the auditorium could possibly be shut down, resulting in a loss of revenue from renting the facility for weddings and parties.

Roads superintendent Clayton Cameron requested permission to start pricing of a new truck with a two-way box sander and snow plow that could sand the roads in the winter and drop gravel in the summer.

"I realize you've got other people who want money, but they won't be able to drive down the roads unless we get this back-up unit," he said.

The estimated cost of the new roads truck is $120,000.

"We have so many people on our back to get new things," lamented Deputy Reeve Wilson. "If we get you a new truck, how are we going to help other people?" Wilson hadn't heard the end of it yet.

Next fire chief Don Booth presented council with a request for a new fire truck. He literally came hat in hand, and addressed Meaghan Obee as "your worship reeve."

After explaining that a new truck would cost the township between $86,000 to $91,000 (minus $42,000 set aside in a reserve fund), Booth reminded council that the present truck is 18 years old, and would serve as a good back-up vehicle.

"I drove the fire truck, and it's in pretty good condition," Cameron interjected. "I strongly urge that a roads truck is the higher priority."

So council was in a quandary, trying to decide who's request was more important. Deputy Reeve Wilson thought he had the answer that would at least please two of the presenters.

"Would it be possible to get a fire truck with a snow plow and a box for sand?" he asked tactfully.

"At least my truck is cheaper than Clayton's," pleaded Booth.

As council tried to get the facts straight on which department had how many trucks, and whether the arena needed a truck or a roof, parks manager Ivan Ingram figured it was as good a time as any to stand up and voice his complaints.

"I realize I'm not on the agenda," he explained, "but these guys all have a place to work out of at least. I'm working out of a cold, dark barn."

Council also realized Ingram wasn't on the agenda, and decided to ignore his pleas. They were also leaning toward the financing of a new fire truck, much to the roads superintendent's chagrin.

"I assume you have some complaints about road washouts," he addressed Reeve Obee. "Yes," she answered, matter of factly.

"Well, we can't fix them," he insisted. "I'm afraid that if the fire truck has to run over the road that is washed out, it's going to have to wait until summer when we can fill the roads. They had a fire call down a private road in the last few days, and the road was so bad they had to walk in part way. Well, that's the way the roads are going to be."

Reeve Obee had two letters from Watts Dogg, the township auditor. The first told council to practice financial restraint, as money for all the requests was not available. The second letter announced a $10,000 grant from the province which could be used to improve the roads, fund a drug and alcohol abuse program, fight pollution, increase summer holidays from school or fund a municipal swimming pool.

Each council member had an opportunity to comment on the grant. There were some tempting choices for these students, but it was a mock council, after all. Deputy Reeve Wilson said the money should go toward roads.

"I feel that it is not our job as a council to figure

INVITATION TO PARTICIPATE Resource Management Plan Victoria County Agreement Forest

The Minden District of the Ministry of Natural Resources is about to initiate a Resource Management Plan for the Victoria County Agreement Forest which is comprised of tracts in Somerville, Laxton, Emily and Manvers Townships. (See map below.)

The plan will be prepared in accord with the concepts of Integrated Resource Management (IRM) which is defined as "the coordination of resource management programs and activities so that long-term benefits are optimized and conflicts between programs are minimized".

The management plan will, for example, identify all potential areas of timber harvest, renewal and maintenance for the 20 year period from 1990 to 2010, and specific areas for harvest, renewal and maintenance for the first five year operating period. At the end of each five year operating period, a new updated plan will be prepared for the next 20 year period. The plan will also address other resources such as wildlife, fisheries, their management, and resource uses such as recreation. Planned road locations (if applicable) will be described, as will any identified concerns to other users of the forest.

One major objective of this planning process is to translate objectives and targets from higher order plans (e.g. District Land Use Guidelines) to "on the ground" actions, providing detailed direction about how related objectives and targets are to be achieved.

You are invited to participate in the preparation of this plan by submitting your comments either verbally or in writing, to the District Manager, Ministry of Natural Resources, Minden, Ontario K0M 2K0, (705) 286-1521, by May 17, 1989. Please identify areas which you feel contain values that may be affected by resource management operations, specific issues or concerns which you feel should be addressed, or any background information you may have on the planning area.

Public comments will be sought at the following additional stages in the preparation of the resource management plan:

Cottagers seek tax reform

and building skyrocketed. "In the last 10 years, prices have increased drastically for some sorts of property, and not so much for others. Some people may no longer have the means to pay for an increase on property they bought several years ago.

"There is no doubt that many cottagers have high incomes, and therefore would pay more income tax. But there are others of more modest means, and they have a hard time of it. It's been a growing problem, and it has grown with the decreases in provincial funding of education."

Lastly, although property taxes bear no necessary relation to income, cash flow or wealth of the owner, "it is relied to an extraordinary extent as a means of raising revenue in Ontario.

"No other province and no other country relies as heavily on the property tax as does Ontario," says Beare. "And no other group in the province pays so much in property tax for so few services as do Ontario cottagers."

Measured as a proportion of gross domestic product, Ontario relies on property tax almost twice as much as the average of all other provinces, or the United States, over four times more than France, and 10 times more than West Germany and Sweden, says Beare. "Our tax burden is also one-third greater than in the United Kingdom, and they are in the process of abolishing the property tax."

Beare believes a resolution to the cottagers' problems is feasible. He says consideration should be given to determining whether cottage area municipalities are being treated fairly, as provincial grants tend to be low.

He also thinks measures should be introduced to substantially moderate the updates with market value assessment.

"In Muskoka, we had a market value update which was extremely painful for a lot of people," Beare says. One cottager who paid $469 in property taxes in 1972, experienced in increase to $3,018 by 1986. "In 1988, with no new buildings, and no construction to increase the assessment value, his taxes soared to $8,908. If he's a retiree or on a fixed income, that puts him in a tight situation."

Beare says Ontario should also substantially "reduce the burden of property taxation, at least to levels prevailing in other provinces and the U.S."

In an article Beare wrote on behalf of FOCA in Cottage Life magazine, he states this reduction could be achieved if education financing were paid for through "income-related, ability to pay basis by increasing the rate of provincial funding and by introducing an education property tax credit scheme, as advocated by the Macdonald Commission on education financing. This would benefit cottagers, since they represent the one household in 20 in the province obliged to pay this levy twice, and it would neither disadvantage cottage country permanent residents as taxpayers, or harm their schools."

Lake pollution

water with too much algae."

Sherman said concerned boat owners have problems keeping their boats clean, while not polluting the water. And those who use chlorine in their hot tubs and swimming pools must be careful of how they dispose of the water.

"Chlorine is a toxic substance when it goes into a lake. When you discharge a hot tub or pool into the lake, you're creating a zone that is toxic to natural life."

Cottagers were also warned about the use of plumbing anti-freeze, used by many to keep pipes going in the winter. It should be used moderately so it will be diluted before entering a septic system or holding tank.

FOCA have brought their concerns to various ministers such as Victoria-Haliburton MPP John Eakins and Chris Ward, Minister Of Education.

"They've been very polite, but have made no commitments at all," says Beare. "We've got a considerable amount of research on the question, and have put forward a responsible position. But there has been no indication yet that we're going to have the impact we would like."

A letter-writing campaign has also been undertaken, and from 2-4,000 letters have been sent to the education minister as well as cottage area MPPs, says Beare.

"We want to encourage cottagers to basically support the funding of education on an income-related basis. The municipalities are suffering because of the decline in provincial funding. We're sure we have a very common cause with AMO (the Association Of Municipalities In Ontario), with our own particular municipalities and with the school boards. Essentially, we're all pushing in the same direction."

But the issue of cottagers' property tax being used to fund education has been raging for a few years. Are all of FOCA's suggestions to the province realistic?

"Things certainly haven't been going in the direction that we would like," says Beare. "But in Muskoka, we have had promises made by the treasurer when we made our submission to the standing committee of finance."

"He thought that, in the long term, the province should provide 60 per cent funding for education. In Haliburton, I believe the number now is 30-35 per cent, but from what we've seen in the past few years, and particularly the past few months, is that they're going in exactly the opposite direction."

"We look at it in the long term, and we're going to be continuing our efforts to the next provincial election and beyond."

Chief takes hint from students

out whether there should be more summer holidays," he said. "I think that's the job of the school board."

Councillor Max Weber played with the idea of a swimming pool, as there are "no winter activities for senior citizens and junior kids."

Councillor Jennifer Oitment saw road improvement as being the only choice, and thought a swimming pool in the arena would be ridiculous. "It's not a good idea because they're not going to have a very good roof now," she explained.

Councillor Andrew Shapcott and Reeve Obee also both agreed on road improvement, so the $10,000 will be used to pay for the new truck, complete with two-way box and plow. Council also decided to finance a new fire truck with township money.

"I have to go through all this again with the real council," confided fire chief Booth after the meeting. "At least I'm well prepared to explain why we need a new truck."

Lot levy makes Stanhope richer

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

Within hours of imposing new lot levies, Stanhope township was already richer by $800.

Last Wednesday morning, council approved by-law 89-5 which imposes a $400 lot levy for every new lot created in the township. While this fee is high compared to other municipalities in the county, by-law officer Jim Moore said that after researching trends and fees in Victoria County, this figure was "on a general par across the whole area."

Dysart et al's lot levy is $100, Anson, Hindon and Minden's is $200, but Moore said these figures are under review and will probably be increased.

"On a $40-50-60,000 lot, it's a pretty small percentage of the value," said clerk-administrator Gerald Bain, prompting Reeve Harry Davis to add "Plus we need the revenue."

Later in the meeting, a property owner's application to sever two lots from an existing piece of property was met with approval, conditional to by-law 89-5. "We just picked up another $800," Davis remarked happily.

Two fee increases were also approved. Anyone submitting an application to the committee of adjustment for minor variances will now have to pay $150 instead of $100. Applications for zoning amendment by-laws will cost $750 instead of $500.

Moore says the latter two increases will pay for administration costs and the money generated from lot levies can be used for such things as improvements to municipal buildings and recreation programs and facilities. It is not intended to go into the general pot.

Workload rises as building boom swells

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

With a significant increase the building department's work load over the past year, the Chief Building Official for Anson, Hindon and Minden has recommended to council an increase in fees for zoning compliance letters.

In his year end report, Brad Bradamore informed council that his office issued 346 letters with a revenue of $6,920 in 1988, at a charge of $20 per letter. With a $5 increase, the added revenue would have totalled $8,650 last year. Bradamore says a $25 charge for a zoning compliance letter is not uncommon in most municipalities.

Bradamore said he sees a definite upswing in the current building boom, and that his work load has increased greatly between 1986 and 1988.

The number of building permits issued went from 174 to 253. Fees collected went from $8,752 to $45,312. And construction dollar value increased from $4.3-million to $11.3-million.

The municipality's planner has said there have been more severances, rezonings and official plan amendments in one month than the previous councils have had in one year.

Bradamore predicts these numbers will continue to rise in 1989, and anticipates a $15 to $20-million increase in construction dollar value.

Stanhope boating signs to be checked before summer

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

With a busy summer ahead, the OPP has asked Stanhope township to ensure all its boating regulation signs make their warnings perfectly clear.

"The Canada Shipping Act, Boating Restrictions Regulations, which is the authority for erecting such signs, informs us that signs prohibiting or regulating any activity must be clearly identifiable as such, and be placed in clearly visible locations," the OPP's marine officer, Mike Maybee, wrote to council.

"It is my understanding that although cottage associations and other interested groups push for the implementation of regulations on various waterways, the townships are responsible for erecting and maintaining the necessary signs in working order," Maybee said.

He asked the municipality to check to see whether the signs are properly placed, not defaced or weather worn, clearly visible and securely fixed.

Stanhope has nine km/hr warning signs at Ox Narrows, the narrows between Little and Big Boshkung Lakes, and Gull River throughout Stanhope. Similar signs are found in the narrows between Soyers and Kashagawigamog Lakes, Mirror Lake at the expansion of Horseshoe Lake, Gull River from Highway 35 to the Minden township boundary, Gull River south to Gull Lake, and the Gull River outflow of Moore Lake, south to Lutterworth's boundary. On Basshaunt Lake in Guilford Township no power driven vessels, other than battery power, are allowed.

When asked what had to be done to impose other boating restrictions in the county, clerk administrator Gerald Bain replied "about two and a half years of work."

Because boating comes under federal jurisdiction, the route to restricted use of a waterway is quite lengthy. A petition first must show that a majority of nearby residents agree with the plan. If the township approves, the recommendation is sent to the Ministry of Natural Resources. Once it gives the nod, the proposal is sent to the Ministry of Transport and the change must be approved by the House of Commons.

Lakeside residents have become concerned in the past years as more and faster boats are travelling through the lake system.

"The townships are responsible for erecting and maintaining the necessary signs in working order," says the OPP's marine officer Mike Maybee.

had many good opportunities to put something on the board.

Aggressive play paid off in the second period as Haliburton scored two quick goals and opened up the free wheeling offensive play that would carry them through to the championship.

Greg Stamp notched three goals for the day, while Mark Stamp and Steve McCracken each got one on the way to Haliburton's 5-0 victory.

It is the first time that a Peeewe team from Haliburton has brought home an Ontario championship, and they made the most of it, savouring a victory ride through town on Sunday night, and repeating it after school on Monday, as the fire truck led a parade of horn honking cars down main street.

A spider's menace

DOWN OUR ROAD

Sharon Lynch

ed in front of his nose, motionless, like a hunter waiting to strike. Backing away as far as he could in his stooped position, he spied a broken piece of trim lying by the hole. With a shudder he used this to sweep away the spider and what was left of its web, then flung the scrap of wood as far away from himself as possible.

Once his racing heart had slowed he made his way to the sump pump. The noise was louder than in the house. He turned it off and went to work in the sudden quiet. The motor, finally silenced, was hot to the touch. Although he hated the thought of staying down in the hole one second longer, he knew he had to see this through. After a quick inspection he found part of the problem. Knowing that if he climbed back outside to get a shovel he probably wouldn't be able to force himself to return, he used his bare hands to dig a deeper hole for the pump. Then he went over to the other side of the foundation wall to check the pipe, for suspected there was something missing here. Moving slowly, his knees bent almost to a crouch, he suddenly froze at the sight before him. There, spread on one of the concrete blocks, was the largest spider he had ever seen in his life. It stood exactly where he had to go, daring him to come any further.

Luckily there were odds and ends of things strewn across the dirt floor. He picked up the biggest stone he could find and hurled it at the black horror of his nightmares. He told her later it had seemed possible the spider would merely push the stone back at him, laughing unhurt as he himself would fall mortally wounded to the ground. Of course this was not what happened, but in his mind anything was possible in that irrational moment of blinding fear.

With the second and last spider disposed of, he was able to finish the job in no time. He moved as quickly as he could in case more hairy, leggy things lurked beyond the beam of his light.

Crawling back out of the hole, he didn't mind that he was smeared with mud all down the front of his clothes. He replaced the boards across the opening and breathed a huge sigh of relief and accomplishment. He went back into the house to explain to his girlfriend all that had transpired while he had been below. As he spoke there was a distant click followed by a quiet hum that lasted only a few minutes. The sump pump was working as it should.

She smiled in gratitude as he continued his tale of the horrible critters. However her smile lessened slightly when he told her that if she ever again asked him to crawl back under the house, for any reason, she'd have to find herself a new boyfriend.

Road change would mean an end to village

MORE LETTERS

As a former reporter, such a way-out idea hadn't even crossed my mind. Not only is it dangerous and disgusting, it violates every tenet of journalism, which demands "balanced" presentation of a story. Some authority — doctor, lawyer, track coach — should have been invited to state his view to counter the outrageous outlook of a reckless, iron-pumping hulk. Or, Grober should have quoted Dubin Inquiry evidence.

The Echo prints one-sided stories because, as Pizzezy and Grober freely admit, the paper is so badly understaffed its two reporters simply haven't time to garner facts for a proper presentation. But if Echo finances permit no staff additions, and if Pizzezy can't train the staff he has, let him take the obvious alternative, quieting the Highlands' strangled voice to leave nothing but an uncanceled echo.

Sincerely,
Pete Stickland

A little town that was?

To the Editor:

There is a little town with picturesque name of Highland Grove. Highland, because it is set in the Eastern corner of the Haliburton Highlands, but as the map shows, it is in the Township of Cardiff. The Grove describes the setting. Hills and lakes all around. The junction of Diamond Lake County Rd. rambling off to join South Baptiste Rd. while Highway 648 curves through the town having begun at Highway 121 then meandering through Highland Grove, Harcourt and Wilberforce to join up with Highway 503 at Tory Hill.

Local business people of these towns, including Gooderham, have formed an association known as the 'Loop' as this is how the highway appears on the map. It is too early to say yet, as all changes decided by the 'powers that be' usually reach the communities involved after decisions have been established. So rumours abound and 'Hot Stove' residents discuss these rumours as fact.

Whatever the truth is, the residents of Highland Grove are feeling the waves. Is this little town, with its General Store, its thriving little community centre and library, to be by-passed by directing traffic and Highway 648 from Harcourt via Elephant Lake

Rd. and the Peterson Rd. to Maynooth thus hooking up with Highway 62?

If this is the case then Highland Grove will be figuratively wiped off the map. That section of Highway 648 will become a county road, thus probably left to disrepair as is the Diamond Lake Rd., due to the responsibility for its upkeep having more than one township involved.

It is also likely that the general store will lose its Post Office as it will not be on a highway.

The ramifications that the town will die are great, and the structure of the 'Loop' as such will be destroyed.

As I said, all this is conjecture and this letter is only my opinion. However, it behooves all the communities involved to ask questions, demand answers and be asked at least to have some in-put before any decisions are made.

Yours sincerely,
Marian Donovan
Harcourt, Ont.

Village needs road

To the Editor:

Some years ago it was asked, "Where the H is Highland Grove?" We are still here but not for long. With the rumour of plans to re-route Highway 648 from the village of Harcourt north on Elephant Lake road to Maynooth and connect to Highway 62 north, we will eventually disappear.

The village of Bancroft gains a great deal of business from over 200 households in this area. Churches and schools will also lose as people no longer are close to a highway. Property values will drop and Cardiff Township will no longer be able to receive taxes to maintain the area as people move. Haliburton County and Hastings County will have another DEAD area to contend with.

The present route for Highway 648 begins at Tory Hill along with Highway 121 and continues north to Wilberforce, Harcourt and Highland Grove and south again to Highway 121 and south again to Highway 28 via the Dyno Road. This is known as the 'Loop', which joins people together. The change in the highway will cut off this part of the 'Loop'.

To complain about a situation without offering another solution is pointless, so let's look at the alternatives. Highway 648 is in deplorable condition from north of Wilberforce to just north of Highland Grove. This needs to be updated to Highway standards. Now for re-routing. The possibilities are there to just continue 648 to Birds Creek via the South Baptiste Lake Road and connect with 62 north. This will give access to a good highway to Algonquin Park and also service the taxpayers of two counties, Haliburton and Hastings. It will also service the village of Baptiste and many taxpayers in Hershel Township.

The next alternative, from looking at our maps, is to take Highway 507 from Lakefield to Gooderham and have it continue to Tory Hill, Wilberforce, Harcourt, Highland Grove, Birds Creek and link with 62 Highway. This would service more people, and make an alternate route for tourists coming to our area. This would also give a lesser number to our highway, making it more attractive to our travelling friends and tourists.

Hospital must expand

Editor's Note: The following letter has been sent to Ontario Premier David Peterson, with a copy to The Echo.

Dear Mr. Peterson, Subject: Haliburton Hospital Extension

We are writing regarding the delays in proceeding with the construction of the extension to this hospital for 18 chronic care beds.

This will be the first such facility to be built in Haliburton County and with the highest percentage of seniors (19%) in the Province of Ontario, there is no doubt of the need for the facility.

Many individuals and associations like ourselves, have donated most generously to this project which we understand has previously been approved but for which there seems to be continuous delays.

Will you please investigate this most disturbing situation, determine exactly what the status is and the reason for the delays, and take whatever corrective action is required to get the project back on track.

We would appreciate hearing from you in this regard.

Yours very truly,
J.G. Strickland, President,
Miskwabi Area Cottagers' Association Inc.

POINTS OF VIEW

'Where in the world are our priorities? A hospital expansion is put on hold even though the residents of Haliburton County have contributed over $750,000 toward it while an airport goes blithely on with its plans of expansion,' say another letter writer.

To the Editor:

I have a subscriber and faithful reader of 'The Echo' for many years and continue to enjoy the work of your talented columnists — and many times even agreeing with its editorials.

On the table before me I have several issues and as I glance over the many sub-headings, articles, etc., the common denominator of most of them is MONEY. Or, rather the lack of it.

'Hospital Expansion Seems To Be On Hold' — translation: province doesn't have the money — even though the community did more than its share in raising its share. In a later issue, 'Doctor Urges Letter-Writing Campaign to Prompt Faster Action on Hospital' (God bless him).

'MNR Cuts a Hot Issue With Fire Chiefs' — The boiled-down translation again is the province lacks the money.

'Crumbling Infrastructure Means Rough Roads Ahead'. The life-line of the Highlands is rapidly deteriorating. Translation: once again money and the grants provided by the province.

Within the pages there are many other examples of how the lack of funds is hurting in many areas: recycling, education, seniors' projects, etc. But what is this? Now here is an IRONY for you and I wonder how many of your readers felt as I do when they read it. I quote: "Council acknowledged receipt of the following tender proposals for engineering and design services and also supervision of construction on the Stanhope Municipal Airport. Totten Sims Hubicki, $67,000; Greer-Galloway & Associates, $77,774; Conlin Engineering, $126,410; Paragon Engineering $66,100; McNeely Engineering, $140,697." End of quote. Total: $477,981.

Where in the world are our priorities? A hospital expansion is put on hold even though the residents of Haliburton County have contributed over $750,000 towards it while an airport that, to my knowledge, has never been 'home' to more than a score of aircraft, goes blithely on with its plans of expansion.

I implore every one of your readers to follow Dr. Norm Bottom's request for a letter-writing campaign. Ask David Peterson, Eleanor Caplan and John Eakins to explain the priorities of the provincial government. (Their addresses are in the March 29 Echo.) And it wouldn't hurt to write their counterparts in the federal government. Only about half of those funds are coming from the province and there are many more to come! And no matter which level of government does the funding, the SOURCE is the same — the taxpayer's pocket.

Many thanks for your patience.

Reward high principles

To the Editor:

Before sounding off, I'd like to make it very clear that I have no religious affiliation, and only get in to a church every couple of years for a wedding or funeral. Since I am away for the winter(s), I was only recently able to get in on the tail end of the Wilberforce principal's "dismissal" for insisting on the Lord's Prayer as part of the opening exercise. All of this confuses me. Here we have a man (I just discovered that his name is Charles Hughes) who is attempting to carry on the morals and principles of our forefathers who has been maligned by some of the media as well as his school board. Mr. Hughes stands for something that Canadians have cherished for over a century, and instead of giving the man The Order of Canada for having some of the backbone that slid under the door with creeping liberalism in this country, his fellow countrymen want to crucify him.

One might ask, "Why doesn't the Province of Ontario push the issue in the courts?" Our present government is largely Roman Catholic. During the last election, the word went out from the priests across this province. "Vote Liberal, and we have been assured of a Separate school system that will be second to none." After the election, Peterson's government went about closing down public schools, and having the buildings "transferred" to the Separate school boards. You can safely bet that in their schools, religious training as well as the Lord's Prayer is mandatory. Do you think for one minute that they could care less what goes on in this province's Public schools? They laugh, as newly arrived immigrants to this country push their religious beliefs and customs down our throats. Their own children are isolated from all of this, so people like Charles Hughes may be crying in the wilderness.

It has been said that an anti-Ontario government backlash is underway to keep God in the classrooms, courtrooms and wherever the agitating minority seek to have God removed. A meeting was recently called in Thunder Bay, Ontario and 600 concerned people tried to pack into a 400 seat auditorium.

When the time comes, this proud Canadian will be ready, willing and able to financially support any such movement.

Respectfully,
Peter E. Sticklee

More attention needed in filling bins

To the Editor:

I would like to apologize to the members of Dysart Council and the public for the condition that our recycling bin was in last week. It had been overwhelmed by the response. The bin is on its fourth trip.

There is a problem that I hope can be overcome. The section for cans is small. Unsquashed cans take up a lot of space. As an interesting experiment, fill a cardboard box with cans and then squash them. Pop cans crush easily underfoot. Tin cans squash easily only if both ends are removed. Another method is to flatten them with a heavy object such as a splitting axe. This is not particularly easy, but sometimes very satisfying.

Also, newspaper fits into the bin best if bundled with string.

We are grateful for the response to the bin. Preparation of the recycleable materials would give CHANGE better value for the trips that we pay for.

Martha Perkins

does, you have to be sensitive to its nuances. Real life isn't as big and grand and neatly bound together as it is on the screen.

And rarely do you have to look far for something to happen. I often say there's no need to travel great distances in the Highlands because there's only so much beauty you can absorb at once. Instead of rushing from one scene to another, fearful you might be missing out on something around the corner, you simply soak in everything your immediate area has to offer. It usually gives you enough food for reflection anyway.

Some people are deafened by the aura of silence, though there's really quite a lot going on if you tune your sensors to the underlying current of activity. These people seem to want to fill up that space, that time, with things they are familiar with and give them security.

But everyone needs to stand still every once in a while. There's too much that you'll miss if you don't.

Also, we would ask that no plastic bags or cardboard boxes be put in the bin. This increases the cost of recycling due to the labour required to remove them. The only place for these recycleable commodities, at the moment, is in the landfill site. Cardboard is recycled in other areas and Guelph has started on hard plastics. There is much to be done. The recycling industry has to catch up to the amount of material coming on stream.

CHANGE supports the introduction of controls on the dump sites in Dysart. Significant amounts of recycling start to occur when industries and businesses are charged by the container load. Unknown sources of waste are also controlled by having a card system.

However, hazardous waste is in our houses in the pesticides, the disposable diapers, the paints and the thinners, the oil, and the pressure treated wood, just to name a few.

Proper disposal of hazardous waste can be done and it is worth the cost. People bring their hazardous household waste to a place designated as a depot and the material is packed and hauled away by a licensed carrier to be recycled. This kind of program needs to be municipally funded. I've got some stuff I would like to get rid of and I know others do.

Lastly, I would like to inform your readers that CHANGE will be sponsoring a forum, in early May, about what you can do to control the herbicides in your life. Where does all that Killax go?

Yours sincerely,
Eric Lillius

Horseshoe Lake Road name remains

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

After a series of phone calls from concerned residents, Anson, Mindon and Minden council has decided against re-naming Horseshoe Lake Road 1.

Also designated as County Road 20, council was asked to consider a request to change the name to 'White Water Reserve Road' to help tourists find this attraction. Roads superintendent Clayton Cameron looked into the possibility of keeping the name intact, but adding White Water Reserve to the sign. Cameron says the provincial transportation ministry will not allow a double name, but may allow an incorporation such as Horseshoe Lake White Water Road. He added that several residents have contacted him to speak out against a possible name change, as well as to complain about organization of events at the reserve.

Some residents were concerned a change of the road name would be for an event that lasts only "one weekend of the year." Others stated "the white water people do not care for other people's property...and their attitude (is) that the property they own is too valuable to turn into a parking lot, but it is okay to park on someone else's property. How can council change a road name for the white water people when they are not willing to supply ample people to control parking on the dates of events."

Cameron advised council that residents were prepared to take up a petition and appear as a delegation in opposition if a name change was underway.

to thank the local businesses and individuals who sponsored bonspiel in the past season. They included Bishop and Wilson, John Parish real estate, and J. D. Robinson Construction for the one day men's spiel; Haliburton Lumber and Enterprises, Curry Motors, Black's Hardware and Dawson Insurance for the Skyline spiel; PineStone Inn, the Colliver family, and Phyllis Woodcock for the PineStone bonspiel; Linda Beachli real estate for the Ladies spiel; Carnarvon Lumber, Jasco Drug Mart, Northernways Transit and Dawson Gray Dart for the Highland Mixed spiel; Walkers Heating and Cooling, and Manufacturers Life — Bill Keating, for the one day mixed.

The final item of business was choosing an executive for the coming season. Those who will oversee the club's operations in 1989-90 include past president Geoff Ainsley, president Bob Johnston, vice president Jon Lansdowne, secretary Gaynor Goldring, and treasurer Phyllis Woodcock.

Directors for 1989-90 are: Paul Marlin, Edith Hoxie, Rick Wood, Emily LaRue, Sandra Oakley, Art Dawson, Jim Holmes (senior rep.) and Linda Marlin (news reporter).

Sunday's sunshine lured hundreds of kite flyers to Head Lake Park and even though the wind did not co-operate, everyone had a terrific time. The event was sponsored by the Rails' End Gallery in conjunction with a current kite exhibition. Photographer Len Pizzezy wanted to exchange his camera for a kite.

PEOPLE

Bizarre fashions a thing of the future

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

ADLTS NEED TO SHAKE OFF the confines of maturity and rediscover their child-like ability to see everything which is new and wonderful in the world, a conference of fibre artisans was told on the weekend.

"If we look at children, they have all the fun and spontaneity we don't have as adults," guest speaker Ankaret Dean told the 215 people gathered at the PineStone Inn on Saturday for the annual Ontario Handweavers and Spinners conference. What children know and adults forget is that "doing what you're told is never as much fun as doing what you want. Why do we lose this?"

Using slides to emphasize her point, Mrs. Dean showed works of long ago weavers who were "making images as they saw them." Referring to one of a battle scene, she remarked "I love the horse on its head."

This way of using their art to record the images of their lives was lost in most adults but it has been retained by children. A group of youngsters who did not learn how to draw or paint were given a loom instead. The ferocious bull which terrorized their world was made larger than life, its forelegs wrapping around a helpless child as the others cowered in fear.

While some pioneers in the last century continued on with this type of tradition, most adults veered towards what was safer—patterns. You didn't sew a dress without a pattern, or begin to knit without one by your side; embroidery still required craftsmanship, but at least there was a pattern to follow.

Patterns defined people until the explosion of the 1960's, Dean said. With the emergence of the "hippie" generation, "we let it all hang out. It was much more fun to do our own thing without someone telling us what to do."

"Macrame came off the wall and onto the body" and now individuality was truly worn on your shirt-sleeve, or whatever else you could decorate.

The power of these years is so great, it never really left us. "We have this exuberance which is still with us from the 1960's." Textiles began to attract all kinds of people from all walks of life. Yet from time to time, one gets caught up with structure once more and must stop to ask "How can we forget the up-tightness and escape?"

Don't try first silliness at home

One of Mrs. Dean's suggestions was to "have fun with people," advice put to practice later in the day when everyone was given a grab-bag of odds and ends and asked to decorate a hat with them. Silliness seems stupid when you're alone at home, Mrs. Dean warned, so it's best to enjoy "boisterous gaiety" in a crowd situation so you can't revert back to your former self.

This theory, in part, sprang out of a technique and design course she took at Sheridan College. She too learned to look at what was around her for her inspiration, to become more visually aware of the commonplace.

The result? Well, there's the series of table mats which each depict a meal in the day—the bacon, eggs, toast and coffee looked good enough to eat and drink. (For lunch she had a hamburger, banana and milk while she appeared to enjoy a traditional dinner of steak, baked potatoe with sour cream, and corn.)

"You don't have to look further than your plate" for ideas, she observed.

Yet at the same time, she advised new initiates, "we need a goal because we need to know where we're going and look for ways to get there."

She used to live along the shores of Lake Ontario and she wanted to reflect the scenes around her in her weaving and basketry. However, instead of tapestries with identifiable features—the water, a cloud, a stone, stump—she concentrated on colour and design.

A winter's morning was transformed into a warm bedspread, which she photographed on her bed, on the lake. "My bed on the lake caused a great commotion" and many interesting conversations were the result. However, the Hudson's Bay Company needn't be shivering in its coats; "I never did sell the idea of my Lake Ontario coat."

Other inspiration came from religion's symbolism. Secular art wasn't known until the 1600 or 1700's and by searching into the past and the images of the church, she came up with a series of tapestries.

"I think we should all plagiarize as much as we can," she then advised her audience of how to find other ideas. "We've got all these things in museums we can look at for inspiration." Bed bug traps, for instance.

Traveling also provides a gateway to a keener sense of observation because everything is new and you have the time to enjoy it. Cameras and sketch pads are "ways of recording your visual awareness" and should be made full use of.

Then, "if you don't want to get heavy in theory, I'd then go to spontaneity." The pressures of cooking for a family gathering were relieved when she wove a turkey in a basket—using basketry methods. Her grandchildren's admiration of He-Man and

Sheena, "disgusting" characters though they are, provided the inspiration behind a collection of space age, woven costumes. "I wasn't brilliant—it was all there."

Working with others spurs you on as well. Marilyn Brooks wanted her to come up with a certain style design. Mrs. Dean didn't know how to do it at first but by thinking things through she found a way. But she was prepared for it to be a flop.

"We don't want to be safe. We want to try out things and hope they work. We've reached the stage where we can use art as an expression. We must do things even if we're not sure it's going to work."

It may look silly, it may look as if a child could have done it, but the important thing is to greet circumstance with spontaneity and use our imaginations to see where things go from there.

Mrs. Dean's speech was part of an event-packed day of events planned by the local guild of weavers and spinners. This is the first time the conference was held in this area and everyone must have had a case of spring fever since there was a waiting list of people wanting to attend.

However, organizers were able to discover the fun in such a task. Or at least it looked that way when they put on their "fun with fibres fashion show."

Playing with words, and weaving and spinning techniques, they orchestrated a show which was enjoyed by everyone. Coco "Chenille" and her short-waisted jacket, mean-faced Sam and Samatha "Snarl", had everyone laughing thanks to their antics and the script written by Virginia Muenzel and Wendy Bateman, and read by Kent Farndale. They even managed to make a political statement—Fred and Fritz "Future Fabric" reminded the audience that if the world's natural environment is not protected, weavers will be plying their craft with plastics instead.

"Samantha and Sam Snarl" were stepping out in high style last Saturday at the PineStone Inn. Portrayed by Judy MacKness and Ed Muenzel, the mean-faced duo had everyone laughing at their antics.

Students found dinosaurs in theatre

COBOCONK NEWS

Harry Griffin, youngest brother of the late Art Griffin, died in Toronto recently. Ann Griffin attended her brother-in-law's funeral.

The junior Kindergarten to Gr. 3 students of Coboconk Public School journeyed by bus to the Academy Theatre in Lindsay on April 6 to see "Dinosaurs".

On Thursday, April 27 Coboconk Public School will be holding an open house for Education Week. The general public, as well as students and their parents, are invited.

The main event that will be occurring will be held in the Gr. 7 and 8 room. There will be French Cafe, called Cafe Kristy. Come in any time between 7:00 and 8:30 p.m. There will be live entertainment, coffee, tea and croissants for sale, plus many other goodies. Money raised goes towards Gr. 7 and 8 trips. We hope you will come in and enjoy yourself.

Also, during the open house, there will be book fair in the library. We hope to see you on April 27.

A thought to ponder: If you are looking for friends, find those who need you. That statement was made by one Georgia Miller.

Winners in the Coboconk Seniors' card games on April 11 were: Euchre - Frieda Boyce 74, Norma Herbert 73, most lone hands - Marjorie Lee (3), consolation - Maude White 40. Gents - Stan Stewart 75, Doug Taylor 68, most lone hands - Bruce Colquhoun (4), consolation -

George Quibell. Bridge - Marj Taxlay 4430, Aileen Warren 4930. Gents - Joyce Thompson 4300, Don Warren 4010.

Work will begin on highway

WILBERFORCE NEWS

by Marian Donovan

The Southeastern Haliburton Business Association or 'Loop' are holding a potluck supper and social evening at the Harcourt Community Centre, Harcourt on Saturday, April 22, to commence at 6:30 p.m. This event is for all members of the association and the price of admission is that you bring your favourite dish or goodie. I am afraid I did not make myself clear in my last announcement that it is only open to members of the Loop Association.

On Monday, May 1 the Harcourt Community Art Group will hold an open house evening to display the work of all who have attended the art classes held by Claire Loft. Doors will open at 7:00 p.m. and refreshments will be served. Come out and see the talent in your own area and talk to some of the budding artists who have spent their winter hours in this relaxing pastime.

Exciting news: The province's construction sign is up on Highway 648. Also there are painted marks on the roadway. So it's true, the work is really going to begin. Of course there will be some inconvenience and traffic will have to contend with some delays, but it will all be worth it when the job is done and many motorists will breathe a sigh of relief for the condition of their cars.

The Legion hall welcomed public speaking contestants from Zone F5 on Sunday, April 9. This marked the first time that Wilberforce Branch 624 has hosted the event and Legion members were pleased with the fine attendance.

Public speaking is a youth education project sponsored by the Royal Canadian Legion that encourages young people to research information and present it to an audience, to develop poise and clear thinking. It enables them to mold and express their opinions as our future informed citizens.

About 30 contenders, from four age categories, spoke on a wide variety of topics. The interesting subject matter chosen by these bright young people made choosing a winner very difficult for the judges.

The program was in the capable hands of Howard Cywulski, chairman of youth education from the Keene branch. Among the guests attending were the Zone Commander and two Deputy Zone Commanders.

The program is open to all of Ontario's youth. Winners advance to the District Speak-off, held in Bowmanville, and could continue to take part in the provincial program.

I have not said much recently about our Topaz bowling team, as we had slumped to fifth place and were struggling to get ourselves in gear. However, with the help of Cindy (the kid) Smith, Mom Sandy and a very determined Dolly Ragnar, we have surged to third place and are still surging. We have a 'pot' into which we deposit a nickel each time we hit a head pin and needless to say have accumulated quite a few dollars. This we are going to donate to our library, toward the copying machine fund.

Phyllis Bowen and Garf Hogan took high score prizes at the Monday night euchre at Highland Grove. Most lone hands were held by Irma Dunford and Sulo Soper. Low score went to Doris Hogan and Hubert Dunford and the travelling prize to Irwin Bowen.

Bridge night at Tory Hill saw Mike Collins claim the first prize. Mike hails from Gooderham and is the organizer of the bridge club. Second from Wilberforce was Ida Holmes and third Evelyn Vanderland from Gooderham. The consolation was won by Jim Ross of Wilberforce.

Deer roam the roads

DORSET NEWS

by Phyllis Briscoe

Happy birthday wishes are sent to Todd Brooks, who celebrated on April 16.

The Dorset Senior Club will be having evening meetings on Wednesday, May 3, instead of meeting in the afternoon. That meeting will be a potluck supper at 6:00 p.m., followed by bingo. On April 26 the program will be games and cards. On the 19 a film will be shown. On the 26th the club members will be going bowling at Carnarvon. The April meetings will be at 1:30 in the afternoon, except the bowling, which will be at 10:30 in the bowling lanes.

We have several people in the hospital and we wish them all better health in the near future.

Huntsville has nothing on us. We have our own lake right in the centre of the village. It appeared when the snow melted so fast and the rains came. We hope it will evaporate soon if we can get away from the weather.

A big event is coming up. Art and Dot Lock are celebrating their 50th wedding anniversary a week from today, April 19. We wish them many more years of happiness together.

Motorists should be aware of the fact that there are still a number of deer that roam near the public roads and cross them from time to time. If hit by a car a lot of damage can be sustained by the car and occupants, as well as the deer. So drive cautiously and when you turn a corner take care that there isn't an animal standing or leisurely strolling to the other side of the road.

H.H. When you boil eggs in an aluminum or other metal pan, the pan very often becomes dark and unsightly. Add a bit of table salt to the water and it will prevent this.

Trek through Europe was a true adventure

WEST GUILFORD NEWS
by Eleanor Cooper

At long last here is a report on two young travellers' journey through Europe. Janet Geddis, daughter of Bill and Nancy, and Suzy Blake of Eagle Lake back-packed through Europe from October 1988 to February 1989. They started off in England, and used various modes of transportation — train, plane, boat — to tour through Belgium, France, Portugal, Spain, Switzerland, Austria, Germany, Holland and Egypt. This last was where they rode camels.

While in Israel for two months, they lived and worked in a kibbutz. Their parents were glad of this small permanency because it gave them an address and access to telephone connections. They saw the pyramids, visited Vatican City, loved Interlaken in particular, and returned there to meet some of the others they had met previously and who used youth hostels as they back-packed their way from country to country. They even located Krista Mitchell and Lindsay Tashlin of Haliburton, who are students on exchanges this term.

To return to ordinary life in the community: Frank and Doris LaPorte are on holiday in Myrtle Beach. The Fletchers of Hamilton area were visitors at Carol and Ted Duncan's last week.

Congratulations to Isabelle Gibbs on her 75th birthday last week.

Sympathy to Iris Freeman and family on the death of her husband (Maurice) John on April 10. The funeral was in St. Paul's Anglican Church in Uxbridge.

Jean and Harry Randall are back from Florida.

Maple syrup operations are concluding around here at our sugar bush, at Curtis Sawyer's, at Neilson Sisson's and Dick Henderson's.

Get well wishes for Leslie Chumbley, recovering from surgery in Oshawa General Hospital.

A HUG FOR 100!

Just to let her know she's welcome, Adam Trueman gives Rachelle Barrette a big hug on the toddlers' slide at the Wee Care Day Nursery in Haliburton. Two-year-old Rachelle was the centre of attention last week when she became the 100th child to enroll in the program.

New treasurer elected

SENIOR LEAGUE
by Winnie Barnum

Hello Senior League readers: Do you think spring is just around the corner? This week a seminar was held Thursday and Friday in the auditorium, so we had fun and fitness in the main lounge.

The Sarah Group Ladies of the UCW brought our Thursday tea. It was delicious and enjoyed by a large number residents. We appreciate it very much. Following our tea party we held our residents' council meeting at which we elected Ada Lewis for our treasurer as the previous one resigned.

In the evening Jim Carrell and Steve Crowe of the Kinsmen Club came to call bingo. Everyone won, but some had more bingos than others.

Friday morning a movie was shown in the main lounge since Linda and Doris were attending the seminar.

Mrs. Coleman had bible study for us. She explained Luke 10. Then Linda and Doris took us for a short drive in the bus to Carnarvon, the foot of Maple Lake, over to Highway 35 and home. Of course we stopped at Kawartha Dairy for ice cream cones.

Saturday afternoon we had a short period of bingo in the main lounge.

Ada Lewis had a surprise visit from a cousin from Fenelon Falls and three cousins from Kingston. Mrs. Baron came Sunday night to play the organ for our Chapel service, but she became ill. We sincerely hope she is feeling better. Mr. Burgess conducted our service.

Monday night movies were 'Peter and the Potter', 'Wilderness Treasure' and 'Mountain of Dreams'. They were very good and those who were there enjoyed them.

Pastor Fast conducted the chapel service Tuesday. He accompanies the singing with his guitar.

April 8, Ada Turrall and her grandson Allen and his wife Donna from Newmarket, and three children, Alanna, 15, Drew, 12 and Errin, 10, to visit her and took her out for lunch. April 3 was her 87th birthday, but Allen had to work that day, so they came on the 8th. It was a happy surprise for Ada and made her very happy. Tuesday my grandson Kevin and his girlfriend Claudia (from Germany) came to see me for awhile. A gentleman from Hall's Lake came Tuesday to see Ruby Lewis. He brought her a painting he had done of her home at West Guilford. She is very pleased to have it.

Wednesday night Earl and Kathy came and played the piano and violin. The residents enjoyed them very much. Then the Masonic Choir, led by Bill Gliddon, came and sang. They were so good. We enjoyed and appreciated them coming when the weather was not the best. Thank you all and we are looking forward to your next visit.

Hospital on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Rod Harrison of Norland visited his mother, Mrs. Earl Harrison, at Keswick on Friday, April 14.

I enjoyed dinner with our son and family, Bob and Marilyn, at Peterborough last Sunday. Clint and Heather Hirstwood and family also attended.

Maple syrup from the highlands is sure to help sweeten you up

NADA'S KITCHEN

Nada Vaughan

"For the kingdom of God is not a matter of talk but of power." 1 Corinthians 4:20

Maple syrup — nature's natural sugar! While I've been flipping pancakes at Dawson's Sugar Shack, I've come to realize the hard work in making maple syrup, but also the deliciousness of it!

MAPLE OAT SQUARES

1/3 cup butter or margarine
1 cup Haliburton Maple Syrup
2 cups quick-cooking rolled oats
1/4 cup wheat germ
1/4 cup chopped walnuts
1 egg

In medium saucepan, bring butter and syrup to a boil over medium heat, stirring constantly. Continue cooking for 3 minutes. Remove from heat and add remaining ingredients; mix well. Spread evenly in a greased 9x9 square pan. Bake at 375° for 15-20 minutes, or until lightly browned. Cool and cut into squares.

MAPLE BAKED BEANS

1 pound dry white pea beans (about 2 cups)
1 cup Haliburton Maple Syrup
1/2 cup chili sauce
1 small onion, chopped
1 tsp. salt
1 tsp. dry mustard
3 slices bacon, cut into 1-inch pieces
2 cups boiling water

Place beans in large saucepan, cover with water and bring to a boil. Simmer for 2 minutes. Remove from heat and let stand, covered, for 1 hour. Drain. In a small bowl, combine maple syrup, chili sauce, chopped onion, salt and mustard. Place half the beans in a 2-quart casserole, top with diced bacon, then remaining beans. Pour syrup mixture over beans. Add boiling water. Cover and bake at 300° for 6-7 hours, adding more water as needed to keep beans moist. Makes 8 servings.

MAPLE SQUASH BAKE

1 butternut squash
1/3 cup Haliburton Maple Syrup
2 tbsp. margarine
1/2 tsp. nutmeg
1/2 tsp. salt
1/8 tsp. pepper
2 tbsp. Haliburton Maple Syrup

Peel squash, remove seeds and cut into 8 pieces. Cook, covered, in boiling water for about 15 minutes or until tender. Drain and mash squash. Add 1/3 cup maple syrup, butter, nutmeg, salt and pepper. Spoon into 1 quart casserole. Drizzle with remaining 2 tbsp. maple syrup. Bake uncovered at 350° for about 20 minutes. Makes 8 servings.

MAPLE FRENCH TOAST

3 eggs
1/2 cup Haliburton Maple Syrup
1/3 cup milk
1/2 tsp. vanilla
1/4 tsp. salt
6 slices French bread, 1/2 inch thick
2 tbsp. butter

Beat together eggs, syrup, milk, vanilla and salt. Place bread slices in single layer in 9x13 inch dish. Pour mixture evenly over bread. Cover and refrigerate 3 hours or overnight. Melt butter in large frying pan. Add bread slices and brown both sides. Serve hot with maple syrup. Makes 3 recipes.

KINMOUNT NEWS

by Millie Moss

Bev and Len Sydenham of Norland welcome home their friends Elinor and Scott Hannah, also of Norland, from their Florida travels. While there, Mr. Hannah became president of the Flamingo Society, so congratulations are also extended.

Results of the Kinmount Seniors' Railroad Station Drop-in Centre euchre games, Thursday, March 30, were: ladies' high - Autumn Watson, ladies' low - Nora Crego, men's high - Martha Mansfield, men's low - Garland Barkwell, lone hands - Charlie Henderson. There were 17 players for the evening.

Happy birthday to Ann Rivers of Kinmount on March 30.

There was a good turnout at the bingo games on Thursday evening at the Cobocok Legion and also at the Kinmount Legion on Friday evening.

Irene Bartley of Norland visited with Mary and John Pyke at their Norland home on Sunday, April 2.

Congratulations to Leona Taylor of Kirkfield, who won the $300 jackpot at the Kirkfield Lions' bingo, Tuesday, April 4.

Barbara McCluney, with son Dan of Kinmount enjoyed over a week visiting another son, Michael, who is with the Canadian Armed Forces in Winnipeg, Manitoba. They spent Easter Sunday at a hockey game played by Winnipeg and Vancouver teams, with Vancouver coming out on top. Welcome back home, Barb and Dan.

Happy birthday greetings to Michael McCluney on April 4, Bonnie Quinn and her sister Suzanne Thompson, both on April 9, Dora Lilley on April 11, Aileen Brown April 27.

Hilda Buxcey over Norland way fell on ice recently and Joan Hyams of Kinmount on her way home from Hawaii had a tumble down a stairway. Both these ladies are nursing a lot of bruises and sore spots at present and we wish them well.

Russell Graham of Norland was the winner of the Volunteer Firefighters of Norland hockey pool on Saturday, April 1.

Recent visitors at the Norland home of Mary and John Pyke were Everette Cameron, Al Hall and Jean Perkins.

This is a follow-up to the plea for a beloved family pet, "Bow", lost a few weeks back, which I had in my last column. I wish I could report a happy ending but sadly, I can't.

There were posters, numerous phone calls and walks around town by caring individuals looking for Bow. His owners do not live in this area, but a while back purchased a home for holidays and eventually, retirement and they always brought Bow along with them. This time however, he disappeared while they were unloading their car. The owner spent countless time and money on long distance calls and finally found out Bow was seen up on a snowbank in the Norland dump. The owner drove from his home immediately to Norland and was saddened to find, following an autopsy, that Bow had been shot at close range by a 410 shotgun. There was absolutely no excuse for actions such as these, because almost everyone around knew that Bow was missing and being looked for. This killer was either sick or a sadist, and I wouldn't want to call him or her a neighbour. Bow was taken back home for burial. A word to the killer: you may feel happy to know you've left a man, his wife and their children a very unhappy family.

Adrian Lee is now home from hospital.

A flock of golden eyed ducks and turkey vultures have been spotted at Moore Lake.

Sorry to hear Gerry Simmonds is still in hospital in Toronto and Esther Graham has been ill with flu again. Results of Kin-

Q. What is the difference between a heart attack and a stroke?

A. Simply put, when the blood flow is cut off in an artery in the heart, a heart attack occurs. When the flow is cut off in an artery supplying blood to the brain, a stroke occurs.

Officers elected to ladies' auxiliary

mount Seniors' Railroad Station Drop-in Centre euchre for Thursday, April 6 were: ladies' high - Ruth Menard, ladies' low - Margaret Kylie, men's high - Charlie Henderson, men's low - Dick Holbrook, lone hands - Gladys Anderson, Norland Volunteer Firefighters' hockey pool winner for Saturday, April 8 was Theodore Watson of Norland.

Some 22 women spent a few hours at the home of Doris, Garland and Jane Barkwell in Kinmount on Tuesday, April 11, the occasion being Dora Lilley's 80th birthday. Lunch was served with a beautiful floral setting. Dora received further lovely flowers from her daughter in Ottawa and a birthday cake baked by Gladys Crego.

Results of St. James,

Kinmount, euchre games Tuesday, April 11: ladies' high and lone hands went to Nora Brandon, ladies' low - Dorothy Anderson, men's high - Gladys Crego, men's low - Margaret Kylie. There were three and one half tables.

April 12 and we're covered in snow again, and still coming down at 8:45 p.m. Oh well, let's hope spring flowers get to visit us soon. Some of the birds look like they want to go back to where they came from.

The special bingo Saturday, April 8 held at Cobocok Legion, in aid of the Victoria County Furnishings Campaign for Victoria Manor, was a great success. Many bingo players turned out for this worthy cause, which was sponsored by Bexley Township.

The election of officers for the ladies' auxiliary of Branch 441, Kinmount, was held in the Legion hall Wednesday evening, April 12, with the following results: president - Olive Morgan, first vice - Mary Hartin Sr., second vice - Verna Crego, treasurer - Margaret Hockley, secretary - June Grozelle, sergeant-at-arms - Evelyn McMahon, sports officer - Gladys Silver. Nine members were elected to the executive. The new Zone Commander, Margaret McLean, along with her assistant, Margaret Dobbie, both from Bobcaygeon, were present for the elections.

Happy birthday to Eva Peacock on Saturday, April 23.

The boys did a great job grading the Wilson East road Wednesday, April 12. Now, if only something could be done about 503. Some of the potholes had been filled in last week, but I'm telling you, going across there would jar you, never mind what it can do to your car.

Many happy years ahead are wished for Brent Anderson and his bride-to-be, Jo-Anne Bailey.

Bill and I appreciated being included in the very nice notice of thanks inserted in the Lindsay This Week on April 11 by Ida and Ken Young and we wish them all the best in their "semi" retirement.

Belated happy birthday to Sheila Lake of Cobocok.

If spring cleaning makes one lose weight I must have dropped 20 pounds so far!

FACTS

Q. Is exercise important in preventing heart attacks?

A. Yes. Regular exercise is part of a healthy lifestyle. In a physically fit body, the heart, lungs and blood vessels work more efficiently. It helps control weight and helps manage your stress level too.
